Letters

Letters to the editor are welcome. While there is no limit on the number of words, please write only enough material to adequately cover the subject. Anonymous letters are not acceptable, although names may be withheld on request.

Dear Editor:

Now do we observe with great interest, writer, George Herman's (Sept. 26th) Letter to Editor, to "King George" in his lapsing from his perenial admonitions to his readers, to be: good, sweet and pure to a listing of American current shortcomings, and as it were referring them to King George LLL as some sort of [illegible] with answers.

Writer Herman asks (deceased) King George to explain the shocking moral conditions of the moral era in which we now live, in a very curious mixture of vice and virtue having strong implication of his having substitued one for the other.

Right here, I feel assured, the answer lies not with King George but rather with ourselves in our lack of understanding of the way of Truth and its implementation, integrity as the basic cornerstone, the indispensable factor in all moral considerations.

Writer Herman's lack of such understanding provides a case in point where in he refers to "the horrors committed in Korea and Vietnam" inferentially as of our making; evidently (in his opinion) due to some inherent American vice and our opponents virtue.

Such a reversal of vice and virtue is in no wise original with writer Herman, but is embraced by so vast a concourse of unthinking citizens and their legislative representatives as to have brought our Country to such an appalling lack of confidence as to give great conjecture as to our Country's ability to endure beyond tomorrow, next week or maybe next month, confidence being the first requisite to any organization of free men.

This recognized current widespread lack of confidence should be proof positive to any rational being that our basic integrity, our adhearance and devotion to truth, our measure of faith in ourselves and our Country has slipped.

I here contend that this soul-destroying lack of confidence will persist as our menacing "Sword of Damoclese" just so long as the current lie of our being goes uncorrected. What lie? The lie of Freedom renounced.

Fundamentally, the lie under which we now live stems from out one time acceptance of The Declaration of Independance in 1776 and its implementation in the Constitution of 1787 wherein we became the Lighthouse of liberty-loving mankind throughout the world. We engendered a nation of men and women gratefully committed to carrying liberty to and encouraging it in all people world-wide who needed help toward the goal of freedom.

Ours has been an unprecedented history of helpfulness to liberty seeking peoples in need, generously given until recently when the greatest exponent of authoritariasm the world has ever known, has challenged us as to the ultimate supremacy of RIGHT (freedom) or of MIGHT, (slavery) as the future of the world and ourselves.

A master of mass psychology, our challenger has cunningly, adroitly succeeded in inculcating within us a belief that: consonant with our Declaration, (...All Men) our wars of freeing Cuba and the Phillipines from Spain, the Jews from Hitler and countless other smaller interventions may have been commendable, but that any attempt to counter the aggressions of the Soviet Empire were somehow vicious. Actually making a mockery of our proclaimed intolerance of aggression in world affairs.

With amazing finess, they worked upon large segments of our do-gooders, our weak-kneed, our holier-than-thou intellectuals, our pacifists and our acadamicians to view any opposition to Moscow authoritarianistic aggression in Korea or Vietnam; or to oppression of Jews in Russia as henious failure to credit the Soviet regime with the saintliness they think it so richly deserves.

Today, Lincolns admonition to the effect that a "world half slave and half free cannot undure" is of far greater import than when he made it.

Today the authoritarian world has loudly proclaimed it as their first objective, the subjection if not destruction of the free world and have so far succeeded as to have won to their side, great masses of the freedom-indifferent who, to justify themselves in their slackerism reversing the civilized worlds moral order by ascribing virtue to slakerism and vice to virile opposition to aggression and its ensueing oppression.

We as a people have got to come to see that our proclaimed opposition to authoritarian aggression is not just idle talk but has the sincerity of action as required.

Then, and only then will the bright sunlight of sincerity dispel the dank fog of faithlessness accompanying any dimunition of integrity within the social structure; rekindling that sense of certainty without which men and nations flounder into destructive ineptitude, conceivably beyond redemption. When and if we as a nation learn that breaking faith with an ally, such as So. Vietnam, or of a people such as Watergate; brings disaster to the whole moral structure and so paralysing the creative incentive of "doer" mankind to put the economy back, its wheels lubricated with the oil of moral integrity for which there is no substitute.

Full acknowledgement that keeping committments is the FIRST law of morality and that morality underlies every facet of economy is our only way out of that uncertain moral mess that is now destroying our free world. May our urgent resort to a renewed integrity forestall such tragedy. May we hear no more of that sickening fallacy that fighting foe Right against Might is less than virtuous.

Dear Editor:

As a regular reader of the Pine Cone and also as one tourist interested in retaining the "Village" character of Carmel, I was pleased to read the comments of Fritz Von Berg in the addition dated September 12, 1974. I was pleased because I agree with Mr. Von Berg and expected some response both pro and con, and seeing non felt compelled to put my oar in.

Your public officials naturally try to avoid offending any of their constituents so there is much trauma in performing their duties. But to control the size of the business area just stick to the orjginal zoning and to protect the prevailing architectural style simply continue to be very selective. With regard to the buildings allowed over the past several years I thought they were all in keeping with the Carmel flavor and the quality of workmanship has been excellent. Even the Plaza-with esculator- which is admittedly big by Carmel standards is done in good taste.

The automobile-parking problem has been kicked around for more than 10 years that I am aware of and were it not a serious problem it would be laughable. The solution is just as simple as Mr. Von Berg stated it. Keep the cars out of the business district, schedule deliveries before 9:00 am, provide free electric cart shuttles between manditory parking areas and the business district, treat the area as a pedestrian mall. Yes, that takes money. So charge for it.

How about it Carmel?? You are doing a commendable job with your buildings. Is there enough fortitude among your city fathers to bite the bullet regarding the automobile?? Mr. Von Berg's idea is valid! I'm only one of your tourists but I approve.

Dear Editor:

Western Union announces it's opening...

For a newspaper of Carmel's calibre, how did such an obvious mistake occur? I remember passing a restaurant in San Francisco for four years: its sign said, "Food at it's best." Have often wondered, with all the money spent, how many people gave the restaurant a miss (even with their money spent on such a large sign) because of the ignorance of the resteraunteurs or the sign company.

However, in Carmel this should not be possible - aren't we, apparently, a community of educated people?

Subscription rates

The rising costs of newspaper production are being felt at the Carmel Pine Cone. Despite efforts to hold the line against rising prices, the Pine Cone finds it necessary to raise its mail subscription rates slightly effective today.

The cost of a yearly mailed subscription will be: Within Monterey County, $7.80; elsewhere withing California, $10; throughout the rest of the United States, $13.50; and outside the United States, $22.

New subscriptions or subscriptions due for renewal after today will be charged at the new rates if postmarked Oct. 10 or later.

Fire station addition to be constructed

Construction is expected to begin within the next two weeks on an addition to the Carmel fire station. The two-story addition will be put up on the west end of the building, and will fill the alleyway between the station and the Gladys McCloud building.

Additional space provided in the new structure will be used to house the city's new fire engine, which is expected to arrive before the end of this year. The addition will also provide space for hose drying.

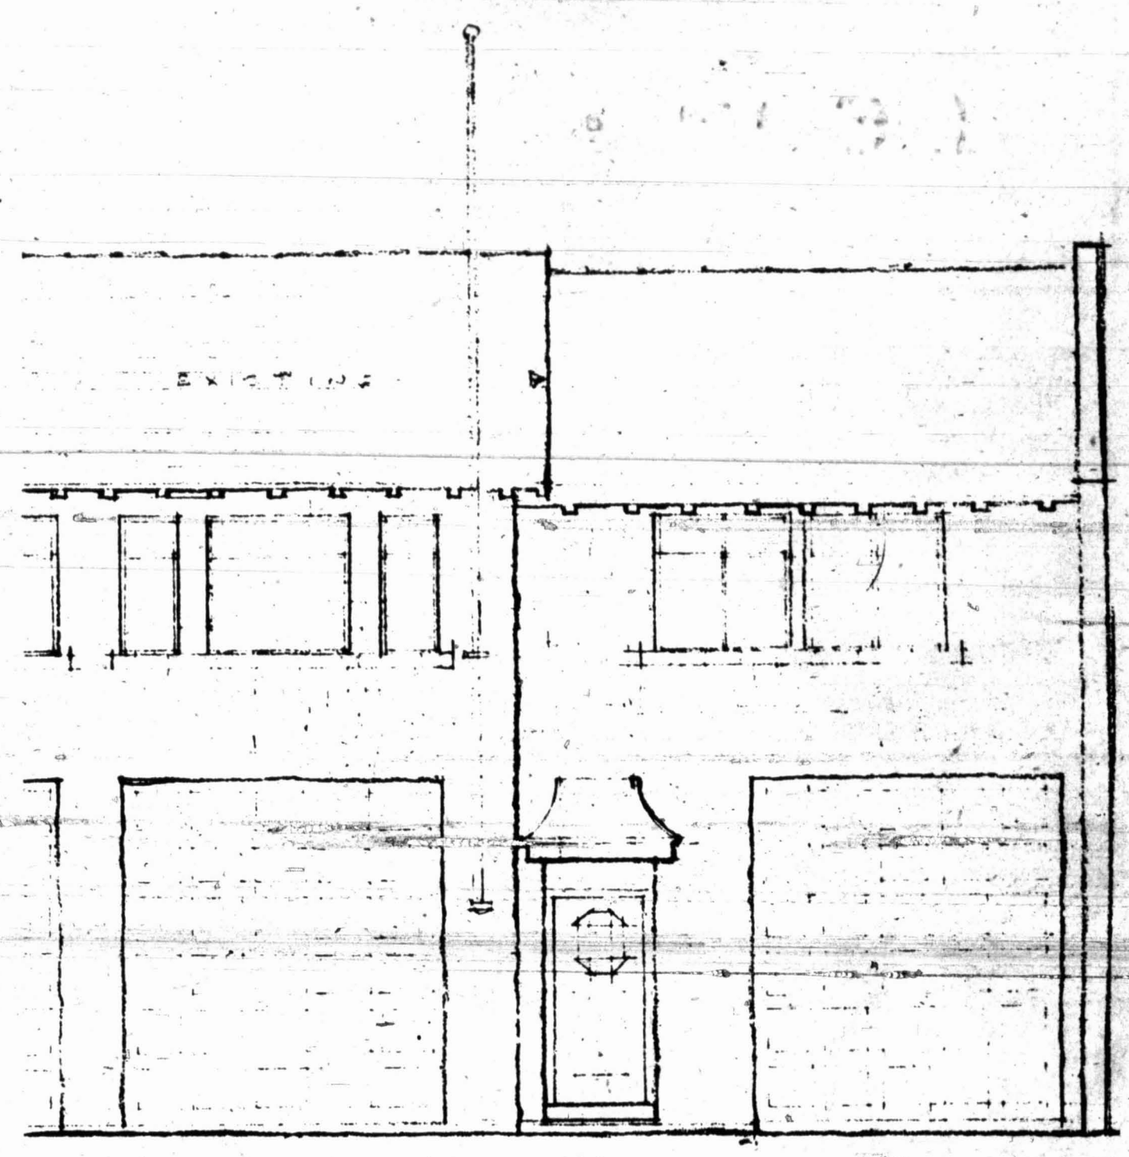
Final approval of architectural plans and acceptance of bids on construction came from the city council on September 30. A low bid of $71,300 on labor and materials was accepted from the Geyer Construction Company.

Construction is expected to continue over a period of six months, with a tentative completion date of March 1, 1975. While there has been apprehension expressed by city officials about the need for finding housing for the large new pumper truck while the new structure is under construction, plans have been made to have enough of the addition completed to shelter the new truck when it arrives this year.

Funding for the fire station addition and the new fire truck (which carries a price tag of $96,000) is being provided by the federal government through a revenue sharing program.

While the cost of construction has risen above the initial estimates of the city, and funds committed to the project will exceed those received from the federal government, assistant city administrater Ralph Cowen explained to the council that the "money will be coming in."

Federal funds are received by the city at a rate of $12,000 per quarter, he explained. Bills accrued on the project which exceed the amount already received will be paid out of the city's general fund. The general fund will then be reimbursed with federal money when it is received.



THE ADDITION TO the Carmel Fire Station, which will be under construction for the next six months, is illustrated in this architectural drawing. The structure will fill the alleyway between the fire station and the rear of the Gladys McCloud building.

13th sand castle contest on Sunday

The 13th Annual Great Sand Castle Contest of Carmel has been scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 13.

Contest officials feel this scheduling will provide optimum tidal conditions and give contestants approximately eight hours of receding tide for castle building. High tide is at 9:30 a.m. and low tide at 5:30 p.m.

Judging will begin at 2 p.m. Awards will be offered in both Advanced Sand Box and Novice Sand Pile categories. There will also be a Grand Sand award and a special theme award for the entry which best depicts "Remember When." A Sour Grapes Award will be available for the worst loser.

Donald R. Brown, Grand Sand Marshall, says this year's theme was selected because, "many of us seem to be remembering when popular music sounded like music, cars were designed to perform, buildings were designed for people, a dollar's pay was a dollar's worth of work and other nice things."

Registration will take place on the site of the particular project. No preregistration or entry fees are required.

Brown says there are no rules, but he cites several common sense items.

Dogs can destroy a sand castle in seconds and are therefore very unpopular at the contest.

Contestants should remove unnatural items when they leave.

Holes of great depth could be dangerous.

The City of Carmel frowns upon the use of mechanical earth moving equipment on the beach.

The contest is held on the Carmel Beach, and is sponsored by the Monterey Bay Chapter of the American Institute of Architects. Contest information will be posted at the base of 13th street.

Appointments to coastal group made

Chairman Charles Kramer of the Central Coast Regional Commission of the California Coastal Zone Conservation Commission recently announced the appointment of Mr. Robert Darrow, Santa Cruz; Mr. James W. Harrison, Pacifica; and Mr. Leon H. Stutzman, Monterey; to the CITIZENS ADVISORY COMMITTEE to the Central Coast Regional Commission.

The appointment of these people was to replace the three members of the Advisory Committee who recently resigned.

The responsibility of the CITIZENS ADVISORY COMMITTEE is to work with the Commission in formulating policies for inclusion in the Plan for the coast as required with the passage of Proposition 20.

The planning program is underway and is scheduled for adoption by the State Commission in late 1975.

1975 fair dates set

The National Horse Show is scheduled for the fairgrounds on Aug 1 through 10.

The county fair has been scheduled for Aug 19 through 24.

In addition to the scheduling, the board of directors also discussed efforts to have Pattee Arena at the fairgrounds roofed

Carmel appeals Rio Road motel, bookstore facilities

The city of Carmel has appealed to the County Board of Supervisors a decision by the county zoning administrator which would allow two more major developments at the mouth of the Carmel Valley.

The appeal, which was launched last Thursday on a unanimous decision by the council, concerns use permits issued for a 127-unit motel and a six-building commercial complex.

County Zoning Administrator Bob Slimmon announced his approval of the two developments last week. The motel, which is being planned by Carmel Properties Company, would be constructed near the intersection of Rio Road and Carmel Rancho Boulevard. The 3.8 acre site on which the motel would be built is presently zoned R-3, a designation which allows motel use upon reciept of a use permit.

The commercial complex is being planned for about three acres located just south of Carmel Valley Road at its intersection with Highway 1 (between the highway and the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center). That land is zoned for "planned commercial development." The six-building complex, which is being planned by Thurderbird Bookshops Inc. owner John Walthroup, would include as many as 25 different commercial uses to become operative within the next 10 years.

Slimmon stated on Friday that the city's appeal would be considered by the county "in about four weeks." While acknowledging that there are substantive arguments against granting approval for the two developments at this time, he stated "if a moratorium on development is to be considered for the mouth of the Valley, it should be a master for the board of supervisors to decide upon."

A long list of arguments against the developments were expressed by members of the city council at last week's special meeting. Councilman Olof Dahlstrand stated that the developments, particularly the motel complex, would create "even greater demands on an already dwindling water supply." He also referred to "inevitable" traffic problems resulting from the two developments on an "already overtaxed" stretch of Highway 1.

Councilman Mike Brown expressed concern about the amounts of air pollution resulting from growing traffic congestion, and being swept by prevailing winds into the Valley. He also spoke of the demands of the developments on a sewage disposal plant which is "having problems again." Acting Mayor Gunnar Norberg described a "very real threat of flooding from the Carmel River which could be "disastrous" for any development in that area.

While council members agreed with the wide range of arguments presented against all development at the mouth of the Valley, they expressed divergent levels of antagonism to the two developments currently under consideration.

The Rio Road motel proposal received adamant objection. Members of the commission concurred with Dahlstrand's statement that "it should certainly be appealed. It would create an enormous burden on the water supply and equally enormous traffic problems." He said the motel (which would be located directly to the rear of the 165-room Holiday Inn) would impose 24 times the density of development as would be allowed in residential use.

The council was, however, ambivalent about the proposed commercial complex. The appeal submitted to the county objects to the project as "premature," but does not object to either its design or proposed uses.

"It's clearly a more desirable project than some we might get in that area," reasoned Councilwoman Florence Josselyn. Members of the council expressed praise for devloper Walthroup's Thunderbird Bookshops Inc., and refered to the project plans which call for extensive open space and gardens.

The city's appeal follows by two months a similar appeal filed concerning a motel complex planned by the Meharry Development Company. That appeal, concerning a 162-unit motel, convention center, and ancillary shops planned for a site ajacent to the proposed Rio Road motel, was denied by the county board in early June.

Testament for tomorrow

By GUNNAR NORBERG
Carmel City Councilman

Sometimes I receive letters from distant parts of the country or from distant parts of the world, written by people who have seen Carmel in the past and who treasure the memory but who no longer have to opportunity to come back again. Sometimes, on the other hand, I receive letters from Carmelites who are only temporarily residing elsewhere in the country or in the world.

One such letter came last July from Canada -- from Baddeck in Nova Scotia -- and it was written by Mrs. Laidlaw (Abbie Lou) Williams whose residence in the Carmel area far exceeds my own even though I have now lived here 34 years.

Abbie Lou had just read a Pine Cone column I had written, and in that particular column I had deplored what had long seemed to me the proliferating and excessive commercialization of the flood-plain land near the mouth of the Carmel River in the subdivisions called Carmel Rancho and Carmel Center. Referring to that Carmel River flood-plain, Abbie Lou wrote:

"You and I have both seen the flood-plain -- which already has too many things built on it -- under water. Miss Tompkins (from whom we bought our house in the Carmel Highlands) once wrote to me that -- in the winter of 1869 -- there was 29 inches of rain in the single month of January, and that her father, who had once owned the Carmel Valley, had seen his family home swept out to sea, and that, subsequently, he had thought so little of the Carmel Valley property that he had simply let it go for taxes..."

This year -- and in recent years -- it has been a dwindling water supply, rather than an excessive one, which has troubled people in government with regard to water carried by the Carmel River. And there has been sufficient serious concern about this limited water supply -- upon which the entire Monterey Peninsula depends -- to cause the State Water Resources Board to urge a halt to most new demands upon that water supply until final results of current research into future water availability have been completed.

And, at present, it is indeed true that there are good grounds to stop, or at the very least to slow down, further commercial developments projected for all areas near the mouth of the Carmel River, simply because of a usually limited water supply.

On the other hand, there is at the same time the grave danger -- and it is an annually recurring one -- to which Abbie Lou in her letter from Canada alluded. And this is a potential danger to which the governing body -- the County Board of Supervisors -- has given so little attention that it has not even officially declared the lowlands near the mouth of the Carmel River -- such as the Carmel Rancho and the Carmel Center -- to be the flood-plain they manifestly are.

The failure of county supervisors to declare the Carmel River flood-plain to be what it is -- a flood-plain -- has also deprived merchants and residents located on that flood-plain from buying the kind of federally-backed, reduced-rate flood insurance which they could purchase and secure once an actual "flood-plain" declaration had been made.

Corroboration of the flood-plain status of the whole Carmel rivermouth area, is plainly put in a June 1967 folder entitled "A Few Words About the Flood Plain of the Carmel River" and issued by the U.S. Corps of Engineers. Here are the concluding words in that folder:

"...For, almost certainly, the Carmel River will flood again, as it has over the years. And the overflowing waters will -- as they have in 1862, 1911, 1938, 1945, 1955 and 1958 -- cause damage unless steps are taken to alleviate it."

In the text of the county's master zoning ordinance there is provision for flood-plain zoning even though such zoning has not yet been applied to the flood-plain of the Carmel River. In

In the public interest

By RALPH NADER

Before it is possible to expect effective anti-inflationary policies to come out of Washington, the Ford administration will have to ask itself if it is willing to oppose some old or proposed pro-inflationary practices.

Here is a handy checklist of pro-inflationary directions which many elected and appointed politicians would rather not talk about with citizens back home:

1. Campaign contributions are a major pro-inflationary force. By buying or renting the White House and Congress, industries can obtain tax privileges, subsidies, inflated contracts or lax enforcement, all of which fuel inflation. Less than $2 million in contributions by the Milk cartel in 1971 led to a reversed decision by the Department of Agriculture to raise price supports for milk. The result: an increase in the retail price for milk of $500 million the following year.

2. Weak or non-enforcement of the anti-monopoly laws permit anti-competitive practices and monopolistic tie-ups to keep prices artificially high. Where anti-monopoly enforcement is successful, prices have dropped in the affected areas, sometimes dramatically. Although both the Justice Department and the Federal Trade Commission believe there is rampant anti-competitive behavior and monopoly in industry and commerce at national, regional and local levels, their budgets for investigation and enforcement are ridiculously low. Their combined budgets for anti-monopoly actions are less for one year than General Motors grosses in fifteen hours.

3. Tax subsidies, cash subsidies and hidden subsidies pour out of Washington to America's large corporations in the profligate, unchecked style of an all-powerful business welfare system. The profit-glutted oil industry, for one, has been on tax welfare for years, paying in percentage terms about one-third in federal taxes of what a steel worker has to give to the Treasury.

The Joint Economic Committee of Congress filled a volume with descriptions of many kinds of subsidies to various industrial, maritime, agribusiness, banking and commercial interests. Most of these subsidy programs are exacted by determined lobbyists with White House connections and plenty of money for the responsive legislators' campaign and other needs. Huge defense contracts, replete with renegotiation for waste, prop up corporate goliaths too mismanaged to float on their own.

4. Certain forms of regulation by such agencies as the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Civil Aeronautics Board keep freight rates and airline rates going higher and higher. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, which says it is against federal regulation, really means that the only federal regulation it is against are the few laws protecting the consumer.

The ICC truck freight rate and the CAB airline rate approvals foster price fixing which the truck and airline industries favor. And so does the Chamber of Commerce. Industry-supported regulation of transportation and communications by the federal government has cost consumers between $16 and $24 billion annually in the form of higher prices and waste, based on the best scholarly estimates of our regulated sector.

One form of deregulation which would gouge consumers out of $10 billion a year, according to estimates of Federal Power Commission economist David Schwartz, is ending price controls over new natural gas. Wall Street emissary William Simon, masquerading as Treasury Secretary, is the leading advocate in the Ford administration for getting this superinflationary legislation through Congress.

Sunset Views:

By FRANK H. RILEY
Director, SCCC

Several of you, when I have met you at the Post Office or about the Village, have said something about still having to get season tickets for our Carmel Festival of Dance Series. As you must know by now, we are bringing four magnificent dance companies to Carmel this season.

The first is the exciting show of the National Dance Company of Senegal on Tuesday, Oct. 22. This will be followed by the American Chamber Ballet on Friday, November 22. Then on Thursday, February 6, the Eleo Pomare Dance Company will perform just prior to their opening in Los Angeles. Finally, on Februrary 21st, Friday, Jacques D'Amboise, one of the world's foremost male dancers will make a special trip to Carmel to conclude the series with one of the most prestigious dance performances ever to appear on the Sunset Center stage.

To see all of these shows in the big city theatres in which they usually perform would cost a pretty penny.

Sunset Center, in its continuing program of encouraging all of the arts, makes it possible for you to enjoy them all at the very reasonable season series price of $15.00 - about $3.75 a show! There are good reserved seats still available but time is getting short. How about getting your order to us today? If you have any questions, give us a call at 624-3996.

Alcoholism Council

Greatest response from Carmel, Pebble Beach

Most calls for information about alcoholism come to the Alcoholism Council in Carmel from Carmel itself and Pebble Beach, according to Mrs. Mary C. Ross, director of the council.

The council is a United Fund agency which depends on the fund for a little less than half of its $27,000 annual budget.

"We must rely on private donations for the remainder to finance our various education programs, although some small groups do help us out occasionally," Mrs. Ross says.

"Our job is education, sometimes of the individual and sometimes of the community. We want to help people understand what alcoholism is and how to deal with it," she points out.

"Our alcohol information center is the hub of our total program," she explains. "People come in to get information or help come mostly from Carmel and Pebble Beach although we do serve the entire Peninsula. We also get calls from foreign visitors to our area, for this is a world-wide problem."

The council is a non-profit organization with a rotating board of directors who serve with no pay. Only Suzy Martz, my assistant, and I are salaried," she explains.

Several members of present and past boards have been from Carmel, including Miss Barbara Kynaston, who has been secretary of the board for over 20 years.

"One of our programs involves educational sessions for professionals concerned with the problems of alcoholism, including doctors, nurses, social workers, and especially employers and labor unions," she continues.

"We emphasize our work with employers because one of the first places alcoholism becomes a problem is on the job when it begins to interfere with efficiency. Most alcoholics are unemployed and it is not until the late stages that the alcoholic is likely to become unemployed," she says.

"We try to educated the employer to recognizing the early warning signs when the alcoholic probably has the highest motivation for overcoming his problem. We also try to educate the employer so he does not feel the alcoholic is irretrievably handicapped," she says.

In addition to referring alcoholics to such organizations as Alcoholics Anonymous, the council tries to deal with problems of the alcoholic's family.

"You don't always have to treat the alcoholic personally. He can often recover through his family if they learn how to deal with the emotional responses involved," she says and notes that families are referred to Al-Anon groups.

Mrs. Ross continues, "We also provide special alcoholism services such as educating for action within the county government, encouraging them to take certain responsibilities."

She adds, "We have a very active education program in schools. We try to teach the prevention of alcoholism, rather than the prevention of drinking, to teach young people who are going to drink to drink responsibly."

These programs include classroom demonstrations, work in a mobile alcoholism unit and administration of the RAP test (Risk of Alcohol Problems), as well as dealing with problems young people may have when their parents are alcoholics.

"Our goal is to help create new attitudes about alcoholism to remove the stigma and fear once surrounding the problem. Stigma and fear have killed more people than alcohol has," she concludes.

Out on a limb

By GARY KELLY
FORESTRY FOREMAN

During the past few weeks there have been six incidents of residents of Carmel cutting down trees on city property. The reason given for the tree removals are varied, some nearly valid while others, "just did not like a particular tree." Of course all these trees will be replaced at the responsible persons expense but the trees that were cut have been growing for many, many years and it will take a long period of time for their replacements to become established members of our forest. The main reason most of the trees were cut was the property owner did not know the exact location of his property line. In some cases it is difficult to determine where city property ends and private begins. Therefore, if you are contemplating the removal of a tree for any reason it would be a good idea to contact the City Forester and get all questions cleared up before you cut. Not only do these mistakes burden the individual resident but the people of Carmel lose a part of their forest.

We've just had the first storm of the season. The damage to trees and private property associated with limbs or trees falling was non-existent. We hope that this can be attributed in part to the trimming and maintenance job the forestry division has been providing during the past year. I know from talking to some "old timers" around town that it used to take days to clean up the aftermath of such a storm.

One thing the first storm does is bring down all the brown pine needles and cover the streets. Some people like this touch along our streets but most are annoyed and can't wait for the street sweeper to come along to pick the needles up. Then there are some people who are "just crazy enough" to sweep up the needles and put them to good use. If you have acid loving plants around your house, these pine needles make an excellent mulch. Spread about a two inch thick layer of needles around your rhododendrons, azaleas, and camellias and you won't have to spend money for chelated iron or acid type fertilizer. Repeat this process every six months or so. These pine needles are also an excellent addition to your compost pile because of the tanic acid they supply.

Speaking of compost, did you know that you can have usable compost from any kind of plant material (pine needles) in just two weeks by using the 14-day University of California method. First you need a wire or wood bin large enough to hold 1 cubic yard of materials. If you use a wood bin it must have holes in it to allow for the air. Second, the cuticle (wax covering) of the material used must be broken. This is to allow bacteria to get inside of the plant material and cause decay. The cuticle may be broken by running your power lawn mower over the material. Third, nitrogen must be added to be used by the bacteria. Put a layer of plant material then a layer of nitrogen (ammonium sulfate) and keep alternating layers until the bin is filled. Fourth, the compost pile must be kept moist. And last you must turn or an area identified by the County Board of Supervisors as being in what's called Zone FP-1 (flood-plain zone no. 1), the single unrestricted use is defined as "crop farming and other agricultural uses and tree farming." (Under a so-called "use permit" provision, the main extra use under FP-1 zoning is identified as "public and private recreational uses." An example of such a use could be a public or private golf course.)

While Abbie Lou in her letters refers to an 1869 flood -- and not the 1862 flood to which the U.S. Corps of Engineers refers -- it is quite possible that significant flooding could have occurred in years other than those mentioned in the Engineers Corps folder, because records of the years in question have been found to be far less than complete. It is, of course, also possible that oral recollections, detailed at second or third hand, might not be precisely accurate as to the specific date of a particular event, even when that date might have been the date of a flood.

Nevertheless catastrophic flooding in the Carmel River water shed -- both in the last century and in the present one -- has been reliably recorded.

In the case of the most recent of the floods -- that of 1958 -- there was reliable reporting of the event (though that flood has been identified as one of the lesser in the series of Carmel River floods).

In the April 3, 1958 issue of the local daily -- the Monterey Peninsula Herald -- the headline spread across the top of the front page said "Families Flee Raging Carmel River" and the featured report under the headline said, in part:

"The Carmel River ran wild last night...It forced scores of families to flee their homes. It washed out bridges -- big ones, and little ones. It flooded thousands of acres of land...Some houses were still submerged up to their eaves..."

In a full-page Herald aerial picture showing the magnitude of the flooding both east and west of State Highway no. 1, and both north and south of the Highway 1 bridge across the Carmel River, flood waters are shown covering the Mission Fields area as well as the then farmlands opposite Mission Fields now known as the Carmel Rancho and the Carmel Center, along with the farmlands just south of the river.

Recollections of old timers reported in that same 1958 Monterey Herald are illuminating:

"...Roy Martin, who moved here in 1909, says this flood is reminiscent of the floods of 1911 and 1914...His brother, Carmel Martin, remembers that the flood of 1914 carried four feet of water over the Highway 1 bridge and the river threatened to cut a whole new channel near the Carmel Valley mouth...Carmel Martin also says his father described 1862 as 'the wettest' year for California and Monterey County. The rains then had continued for six weeks. The Carmel River ran so deep that huge cottonwood trees would topple into the water and disappear...Martin recalled that it was only two years after that -- in 1864 -- that Monterey County has its worst drought..."

Authorities generally consider the 1862 flood to have been one of the so-called "100-year" magnitude, which generally means it is one likely to be repeated in something like a 100-year span. Since such a flood hasn't yet occurred in the present century, it is not beyond reason that it could possibly occur in any coming winter.

It is therefore most important for county authorities -- and most particularly the County Board of Supervisors -- to consider declaring the lowlands near the mouth of the Carmel River to be what they actually are -- a flood-plain and thus making it possible both for entrepreneurs and residents to get the benefit of the reduced-rate, federally-backed flood insurance, which they cannot now get.

And it is equally important that county supervisors also take steps to slow and to stop increasing high-density residential both east and west of Highway 1 and both north and south of the Highway 1 bridge across the Carmel River.

As if repeated price increases granted recently by the Federal Power Commission to the lushly profitable natural gas companies (mostly owned by the oil companies) were not high enough, Simon's latest anti-consumer craze would result in natural gas prices tripling in less than a year from their present record high level. Simon also wants to decontrol "old domestic oil, which now sells for a record $5.25 per barrel, so that it can go, he says, to $11 or $12 a barrel. Imagine what results these two moves would have in gasoline and home fuel prices.

None of these hyperinflationary recommendations has anything to do with cost pressures or return on investment; they have everything to do with satisfying corporate greed of epic proportions.

6. Although the Ford administration, like its predecessor, talks about curbing waste in energy and bureaucracy, it is reluctant to apply the necessary muscle.

Reducing energy waste in industry, commerce, and products like automobile engines means reducing sales of the oil, gas, coal and utility companies. In choosing between corporations or consumers, the White House wastes little time in being servile to the former.

7. The one move which Gerald Ford can make for helping consumers is to urge the Senate Republicans like Senator Robert Griffin (R-Mich.) to stop the filibuster and pass the Consumer Advocacy Bill, S.707. Thus far, President Ford has been silent. So he needs to hear from consumers who are gritty enough to become active citizens and put this and other questions to their President and congressional representatives.

Lindberg show set to open at Art Association

A one-man-show by Keith Lindberg is currently on display (through Nov. 6) in the Center Gallery of the Carmel Art Association located on Dolores between 5th and 6th streets.

Lindberg uses bold, vibrant colors combined with soft mystical lights and hues, the latter radiating out from stylized human figures and other objects, creating a lumoniferous effect.

His still lifes of fruits, flowers and cabbage show a strong and positive rendering in rich colors. While his landscapes are bold and convincing.

Lindberg's art studies were pursued at the Kansas City Art Institute, Chicago Art Institute and other art centers. He came to Carmel in 1961. He is a past president of the Carmel Art Association, and currently is an instructor in the Carmel Adult School.

In addition to many local one-man shows, he has had numerous one-man shows throughout the United States. These include The Sanger Harris Gallery in Dallas, Texas, Childrens' Hospital, Burlingame, California, Howard Goldman Interiors, Dallas, the Erickson Gallery in Palo Alto and the Gyphon Gallery in Denver, Colorado. He has participated in group shows at Lord and Taylor's and Gimbel's in New York. His most recent one-man show was held at the Venable-Neslage Gallery in Washington, D.C.

Locals attend convention

Connie Alonzo, Ruth Gaskin and Myrtle Glynn of The Monterey Peninsula Association attended the 18th annual convention of the American Association of Medical Assistants (AAMA) in Denver, Colo., Sept. 24 through 29.

The AAMA is a national organization of more than 15,500 medical assistants who work under the direct supervision of a licensed physician. One of the major objectives of the association is to increase the education and professionalism of medical assistants.

At this year's meeting attention was given to medical-legal principles and patient care.

3 Peninsula artists featured at museum

Three exhibitions, all by Peninsula artists, will open at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art on Saturday, Oct. 12.

The Main Gallery will feature the works of painter, Joseph Snyder of Seaside and Sculptress, Tiki Heil of Monterey. They won the Best in Show awards in their media in the Monterey County Art competitive exhibition last March.

Carolyn Berry Bishop of Monterey, who won the award for graphics will have her work shown in the Leonard Heller Memorial Gallery.

Joseph Snyder was born in Monterey in 1946, attended Monterey Peninsula College and San Jose State University, then studied under Jacques Jabert in El Molino, Michoacan, Mexico. He graduated with a BFA degree in painting in 1972 from the California College of Arts and Crafts. He has participated in numerous exhibitions and competitions throughout California and has had a one man show at the Villa Montalvo in Saratoga this year.

Tiki Heil, who does fabric sculpture, was born in New Jersey and studied art at the Kansas City Art Institute in Missouri. She has exhibited in the New Jersey State Fair, the Saratoga Springs Annual juried exhibition and the Ft. Ord Invitational Contemporary Fiber show. She has been a resident of Monterey for the last two years.

Carolyn Berry Bishop is well known as a painter as well as a graphics artist here on the Peninsula. She received her BA at the University of Missouri and a special educational credential at Humboldt State University. Currently she works at the Handicapped Activities workshop in Pacific Grove. Having lived in this area off and on since the early 60's, she has been in many local exhibitions as well as in New York City, Poughkeepsie and New Paltz, N.Y. and Eureka, California. Her work is in permanent collections at Brandeis University and Marist College as well as in many private collections.

DOUD HOUSE

New bank facilities to be built in Valley

Construction has begun on Wells Fargo Bank's new $336,000 Carmel Valley office in the Carmel Center, Eugene E. Cochrane, senior vice president of the bank's Peninsula Division has announced.

Completion of the new one-story banking house is scheduled for early 1975. Wells Fargo has done business in Carmel since 1930, more recently at its eight-year-old downtown Carmel office building on San Carlos Street.

The new contemporary quarters designed by Simpson and Stratta, architects, San Francisco, features structural materials of redwood and glass with stucco supporting columns and trim.

The interior main banking floor will enclose 4,200 square feet and will accommodate an additional 600 square feet of space should further expansion be required.

The banking floor will have 10 teller stations and a safe deposit window. Other facilities will include an exterior banking patio with two walk-up windows, safe deposit accommodations, night depository and parking for 24 cars.

The air-conditioned office will feature copper-colored wall-to-wall carpeting, beige floor-to-ceiling drapes, accent vinyl wall covering and three contemporary candlelit chandeliers.

The general contractor is Daniels and House Construction Company, Monterey.

Applications open for Hartnell Conservatory

Hartnell College has announced that it is accepting applications for students to enter its new Conservatory of Music.

The conservatory, directed by Hartnell music instructor Dr. Vahe'Aslanian, will meet on Saturdays and weekday afternoons to conduct a variety of music classes for students ranging from 4 to 21 years of age.

"A superior faculty of 20 instrumentalists and vocalists has been selected to teach small classes, ranging from eight to 12 students, semi-private and private lessons," explained Dr. Aslanian. "Thirty classes of beginning, intermediate and advanced instrumental instruction by specialists in their own field will be offered this year."

The curriculum includes two voice classes for students from 12-17 years of age, taught by an instructor who sings with the San Francisco Opera Company and the San Francisco Symphony, three sections of beginning piano, six instrumental ensemble classes, and three sections of Suzuki violin, which is designed for children from four to nine years of age. Students will also be able to participate in the conservatory's Youth Orchestra and Boy's Choir.

Classes begin Monday Oct. 14 and will be held in the college's Performing Arts Center. Enrollment fees per semester are $16 for class instruction (8-12 students), Boy's Choir and-or Youth Orchestra; $40 for semi-private lessons (two students) and $80 for private lessons. Fees are payable at the college's Business Office.

DU SEL" showing exotic, inhospital shifting landscape of the vast Sahara and a camel caravan on its four-week, 1,000 mile journey. Also, "THE CURE," in which Charlie Chaplin plays an alcoholic who goes to a health resort for the cure.

Are you aware that there are always three exhibits on display at Sunset Center?

The Marjorie Evans Gallery, our main Sunset Center Gallery, changes about every four to six weeks and shows various art works from around the world. The current exhibit, "WAR POSTERS," contains more than 60 posters from six countries dating from WW I through contemporary protest posters. Most interesting study of change of attitudes toward war especially during the present "amnesty" controversy. It is open from 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and also for one hour before each performance in the Sunset Center Theatre.

The Sunset Center Theatre foyer displays informal exhibits of work produced locally or else related to the current Theatre production. The current showing is a sampling of work done here at Sunset Center by artists working in Studio No. 5 under Robert Horne. Included are oil painting and enameling on various metals. These shows are open whenever there is an event scheduled in the Sunset Center Theatre.

Wolcott show set to open

An exhibition of paintings by Diane Wolcott opens at Zantman Art Galleries Saturday, Oct. 12. The artist will be present for a reception from 6 to 9 p.m.

Ms. Wolcott paints sentimental, humorous stories of children at play. Though she concentrates on smaller canvasses, for this exhibition she has painted two large works (24" x 30".)

The artist was born in Kansas City, Mo. but moved to Southern California with her parents when she was six years old. She studied at the Kahn Art Institute in Los Angeles and also at the Kansas Art Institute.

Ms. Wolcott began her career as a free-lance artist, designing and creating Christmas and Easter decorations for Saks Fifth Avenue, and later designed a wholesale line of Christmas decorations.

She didn't start painting seriously until she was 32. She has had several one-man shows over the years. She painted canvasses specifically for this show st Zantman Galleries.

Her source of inspiration, she says, comes from God.

"He has given me a great appreciation for and interest in children: their honesty, humor, curiosity, warmth -- and this coupled with the beautiful world He has given us to live in, presents an inexhaustible source of subjects to paint."

Multiple Sclerosis Hope Chest Fund drive scheduled

The Greater Monterey Bay Area Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society will conduct its annual Multiple Sclerosis Hope Chest Fund Drive Oct. 18 through 27.

The door-to-door canvass for funds is to support MS research and to provide services for MS patients and their families in our area.

An estimated one and a half million young adults are victims of Multiple Sclerosis. The disease is a mysterious debilitating crippler for which there is no known cause or cure. It seems to come from nowhere to strike at young people in their prime years. A major health problem, multiple sclerosis is a greater crippler than polio ever was.

The society and its chapters throughout the country have been greatly encouraged by new developments in research as well as the added thrust provided by the federal government in implementing the recent report and recommendations of the National Advisory Commission on Multiple Sclerosis. The society believes that better community knowledge of MS will strengthen the united effort to eradicate the disease.

Last year the society raised 13 percent more than the year before. 60 percent of the money raised in this campaign will be retained by the local chapter to provide services for patients in this community.

Anyone wishing to volunteer to participate in the campaign should call the Greater Monterey Bay Area Chapter - MS Office - 758-2640.

Branch remodeled

Security Pacific plans open house

Security Pacific Bank's Carmel Branch will hold a community open house on Friday (Oct. 11) to celebrate the completion of its newly remodeled quarters.

Located at the corner of 7th and Mission streets, Carmel Branch occupies approximately 4,800 square feet in a two-story building and offers residents and business men a full range of banking services including drive-up facilities, safe deposit accomodations, night depository with a letter drop, and trust services by appointment.

Manager Victor Pamkowski indicated an anniversary theme will underscore Friday's open house festivities beginning with a ribbon-cutting ceremony at 10 a.m. and continuing until 6 p.m. Anniversary cake will be served throughout the day and sourvenir gifts given to visitors.

"Drawing for prizes, including a portable color television set, will highlight afternoon festivities," Pamkowski said.

Designed by Barstad & Wald of Salinas to harmonize with the architectural atmosphere of the community, Carmel Branch reflects a California-Spanish style and features stucco exterior surfaces and recessed windows. The building is topped by a clay tile roof accented by copper gutters.

The interior of the branch features floor-to-ceiling window shutters. Walnut paneling and furniture compliment the interior color scheme of browns, rust and beige incorporated in Persian carpets and upholstery.

THE MUSIC CORNER

By IRVING W. GREENBERG

THE MUSIC CORNER

The opening concerts last weekend, of the 1974-75 season of the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra, under its musical director, Maestro Haymo Taeuber, found this orchestra in a continued impressive form. Musical contours had been sharpened, responsiveness of the choirs to each other and to the conductor and to the programmatic material had become more oriented, and the orchestral tonality had become more brilliant, pervasive, and compelling. On the program for this concert was the Weber: Euryanthe Overture; the Beethoven Piano Concerto No. 2 in B flat major, and the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 6 in B minor ("Pathetique").

From the first chords of the fiery exordium of Weber's Overture to his opera "Euryanthe", it was evident that the orchestral pronouncement would be brilliant and intensely moving. The first subject, deriving from Adolar's phrase in Act I, "Ich baue auf Gott und meine Euryanthe" (I trust in God and my Euryanthe) was announced by the woodwinds in an exemplary projection. Adolar's "O, Seligkeit, dich fasse ich kaum" (O bliss, I scarce can fathom) in Act II, was beautifully brought out in a long, expressive, lyric line. The short Largo preceding the development of these two ideas and the brilliant Coda were projected with a sense of mystery and triumph in the ringing tonality of the orchestral timbres.

In the Piano Concerto No. 2 in B flat major, Beethoven was still subject and under the influence of the polished manners of Haydn and Mozart. The orchestral forces here are modest, the composer being more concerned with the interaction of piano and orchestra, rather than with increasing their scope of activity. In this particular performance, the piano soloist was a young American, Carol Colburn. She entered, in the first movement, rather unobtrusively, attempting to match the burst of energy exercised by the orchestra. Following a format of sequential discussion between the piano and the orchestra, the movement concluded with a reminiscent allusion of the original opening, and a very showy excursion by the piano.

The slow movement is ornamented with considerable sustained right-hand trills. It is dignified but sad, and is really more intellectual than emotional. In the final rondo movement, in good humor, the piano is in a position to exploit the thematic material, allowing the orchestra to follow in a subsidiary accompanying role, reversing the order of the first movement. Maestro Taeuber led the orchestra with an impressive, incisive beat, keeping the orchestral forces well under control in order to give the pianist every opportunity to exhibit her pianism. However, she turned in a very routine performance, without any inspiration. Inasmuch as this was the first concert at Monterey, it is to be hoped that her succeeding performances in Carmel and Salinas, she will be more secure in her approach and in her execution.

After the intermission, Maestro Taeuber led the Orchestra in a performance of Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony in B minor ("Pathetique") that had all the elements of excellent muscianship--fine and compelling intonation, brilliant tonality, and scholarly, authoritative interpretation. The orchestral forces were most responsive to the Maestro's direction, exposing every nuance of the lyric and rhythmic lines of the score.

In the first movement, with its mournful strain, played with conviction on the deep notes of the double bassoon, the actual lively and courageous first theme appears. After considerable expansion of this material, the suave strings in a most lyric rendition, introduced a note of pathos combined with reserved optimism, accentuated still further by the melodic interference of the woodwinds and imitated in the bass over a sprightly accompaniment by the rest of the forces. A sudden and startling crash interrupts the soft ending of the exposition, and sends the development off at top speed. The Coda, with an excellent brass performance, serves as a conclusion to this movement on a new and solemn note.

The second movement is practically unique in its sustained use of the 5-4 beat, giving the effect of great charm and originality, and carried off most emphatically by the orchestra. The delightful dance melody is interrupted by a repetition of the melancholy strain pervading the first movement, and although there is a recurring note of cheerfulness in the beautiful playing of the cellos and the woodwinds against the pizzicati strings, the movement ends on a note of sorrow.

The third movement is in effect a triumphal march, gathering momentum from the galloping triplets in the lusc[illegible] strings. Th[illegible] other instrument[illegible] short phrases, easily distinguished by their common rhythmic pattern, and ending in a decided syncopation. Here, the oboe shines in the thematic exposure of the melodic material, full of inventiveness and high [illegible]. In the Finale, the depth of despair is reached, with the composer in a most tragic lament. The orchestra brought out this elegaic mood most effectively, especially in the strings, and in the bass. The close of the work is not only pathetic but intensely tragic, completing the most thorough expression of introspective and meditative misery in the entire literature of music. With the performance of this Symphony, Maestro Taeuber and the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra gave a reading that had passion, vibrancy, and tonal distinction.

NEW RECORDINGS

Mussorgsky: Khovanshchina (Soloists, Chorus and Orchestra of the Bolshoi Theater, Moscow, conducted by Boris Khaikin--Melodya-Angel SRDL-4215 (Four Discs).

In the opera "Khovanshchina", as recorded here, the soloists are: Irina Arkhipova (mezzo-soprano) in the part of Martha, a young widow, one of the Old Believers; Aleksei Krivchenya as Prince Ivan Khovanski, commander of the Streltsi (bass); Vladislav Pyavko as Prince Andrei Khovanski (tenor); Aleksei Maslennikov as Prince Vasili Golitsin (tenor); Boyar Shakloviti (baritone) sung by Viktor Nechipailo; Alexander Ognivtsev as Dosifei, leader of the Old Believers (bass); Tamara Sorokina (soprano) as Emma, a young German girl; Tatiana Tugarinova as Susanna (soprano).

In this opera, Mussorgsky was more concerned with creating a great historical panorama than with emphasizing characters or pointing up dramatic incidents. While not essentially a great opera in the tradition of Boris Godunov, made up as it is of a series of vignettes, it still is the work of a great composer, with many pages reminiscent of the best moments of "Boris Godunov". The choral passages, the atmospheric entr'acte, and the poignant closing scene more than compensate for the dramatic shortcomings of the text.

The story of "Khovanshchina" has its foundation in Russian history; in this case, the conflict between the old and the new during the latter part of the seventeenth century, just prior to the accession to the throne of Peter the Great. The libretto by V. Stassov, was rounded out by Mussorgsky with the necessary historical background. Mussorgsky never finished the work; Rimsky-Korsakov became the chief architect in piecing together the fragments left by the composer, orchestrating and completing the score for its publication in 1883.

During the year 1682, a great crisis was close at hand for Muscovites, who were torn between serving one political faction or another in order to protect themselves. Self-preservation was the motivation behind the populace support of one leader or group against another. Thus, the stage was set for a showdown between the Boyars, or noblemen, led by Prince Ivan Khovanski and his son, Andrei, and the Regent Vasili Golitsin. A third party emerged, dissident Boyars led by the Boyar Shakloviti, who resented both the tyranny of the Khovanskis and their loyalist guard, the Streltsy, and Prince Golitsin. Thrust into this conflict was a religious sect of Old Believers, led by Dosifei, who had broken with the Orthodox Church and its reforms prior to 1655. The "new" regime of Peter the Great crushed both the Streltsy and the Old Believers, and it is with the outcome of this clash, rather than of those between the nobles and their followers, that the opera "Khovanshchina" is concerned.

Of the three feminine characters in this opera: Martha, the Old Believer; Emma, a young Lutheran German girl; and Susanna, a rigid fanatic priding herself on her chastity, the role of Martha assumed by that well-known and most competent mezzo-soprano, Irina Arkhipova, is the most important and the most dramatic. She sings this role with great emotional depth, and with extraordinary emotional intensity; and her voice has a powerful and magnificent tonal coloration. The dark nuances of this role are exposed with a mellifluous virility, exquisite intonation, and with a fine florid tessitura. Especially significant are her following arias: The divination scene in Act II, where Martha prophesies Prince Golitsin's doom; In Act III, Martha's song when sitting in front of Andrei Khovanski's palace; and the final scene trio in Act V with Andrei and Dosifei.

Emma, sung by Tamara Sorokin (soprano) and Susanna by Tatiang Tugarinova (soprano) have small but significant parts. These two voices exhibit the typical stridency and shrillness of the Russian high-pitched female voices. Lyricism and foritura, as known to Western European and American ears, does not seem to be an ingredient in their vocalism. However, this tonality is viable within the context of the Russian vocal training. Of the male voices, that of Alexander Ognivtsev (bass) in the role of Dosifei, head of the Old Believers, is the most outstanding, both in his musical as well as in his dramatic elements. He has the deep, powerful and highly intense voice that is so characteristic of Russian basses. His exposition throughout is intensely dramatically lyrical, with majesty and dignity in this taxing role. In addition, there seems to be a sense of fierce and determined involvement throughout the opera, with the penultimate emphatic utterance in the final immolation scene with the Old Believers. Other instances where is rhapsodic and highly emotional is in his duets throughout with Martha.

Aleksei Krivchenya in the part of Prince Ivan Khovanski, is another bass voice that is powerful, assertive, and intensely compelling, both vocally and histrionically. Of particular note is his aria in Act IV, in which he is being amused at home by his Persian slaves.

Vladislav Pyavko (tenor) as Prince Andrei Khovanski, brings an idiomatic type of projective vocalism to his duets, both with Emma and with Martha. His voice has the quality of melodic nostalgia and contemplation, both as to his past loss and as to future resignation.

Aleksei Maslennikov as Prince Vasili Golotsin is another tenor that exhibits a tonality of a most impressionistic nature, particularly in his solo aria in Act II, as well as in his duet with Ivan Khovanski. There is a majestic grandeur and fleeting arrogance shown that sets him apart as a character of powerful inclinations.

And, finally, Boyar Shakloviti, assumed by the baritone, Viktor Nechipailo, is a role of wonderful and finely-wrought tonality, carrying a voice of surpassing emotional beauty and suspense, as well as dramatic intensity. The Bolshoi Chorus sings throughout, whether as the Strelsty or the Old Belivers, with a splendid emphatic and highly-charged sensitivity. Particularly, in the acclamation of Ivan Khovanski in Act I; in the Magnificent choral passage of the Old Believers in the opening of Act III, and in the final immolation scene of the Old Believers. Another marvellous exhibition is the female voices as the chorus of the serving women in their song of the Hungarian mercenaries.

The Bolshoi Orchestra is instrumentally on the same excellent tonal level as the vocal forces involved, palying with outstanding tonal sheen. In particular, this facet is all

NPS concert features old oriental instruments

On Friday Oct. 11, American composer, Lou Harrison, will present a concert and lecture as a part of the Friday Evening Concert Series at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey.

This evening of Oriental classical music and verse, performed using authentic instruments, will begin at 8 p.m. in the school's Ingersoll Hall. Tickets, at $3.50 each, are available at Abinante Music Store in Monterey or by phoning 373-7168.

Lou Harrison, composer, conductor, performer, and poet, has for years been devoted to Asian music and has taken up Korean, Chinese, and Malaysian instruments.

Assisting Harrison will be Richard Dee and William Colvig. The trio will perform on a number of Oriental instruments, about a dozen each, many of them made by Colvig.

Featured, among others, will be the cheng, a 16-string plucked Psaltery with a metallic tone, and its silk-stringed sister, with somewhat the character of a muted harpsichord. The sheng, an assemblage of varied-length upturned bamboo pipes with a large right-angle reed mouthpiece, has a sound somewhat like an oboe. The music ranges from the 9th century to our own.

Tickets are also available for the remaining concerts. They can be purchased in the same manner as the Harrison tickets. The future concerts are: Nov. 22nd, YUKIKO KAMEI, violinist; Jan. 24th MONTAGNANA TRIO, clarinet, cello, and piano; Mar. 7th, CLAREMONT CONSORT, Baroque and Renaissance music; Apr. 11th and 12th, ISTVAN NADAS; and May 23rd, MILLS PERFORMING GROUP, Mills College Faculty.

'Thin Man' benefit play scheduled

A screwball mystery-comedy of the thirties, "The Thin Man," will be featured at a gala showing at the Tantamount Theatre at 3 o'clock Sunday October 13, followed by champagne and hors d'oeurvres.

The event, to benefit Carmel Valley charities will be sponsored by the Carmel Valley Woman's Club and promises to be a "must" on valleyites social calendar before the holiday season.

The Tantamount Theatre, which has long been the center of Carmel Valley's cultural activities, under the direction of Francois Martin and Ralph Geddis, have donated the theatre for the performance.

Based on Dashiell Hammett's novel, this film started a series about a witty detective and his almost-too-good-to-be-true charming wife, portrayed by William Powell and Myrna Loy. According to Francois Martin, a valiant attempt is being made today to catch the wit and humor of the films of the thirties, but they have found it difficult to achieve.

Viewers will have the opportunity of seeing other favorites of the past in the film, including Maureen O'Sullivan, Nat Pendleton, Minna Gombell and Cesar Romero.

Mrs. Norman Bundgard, chairman of the event, has announced that Mrs. John Riordan at 659-2737 may be contacted for reservations. Donations of $3.00 per ticket, will include the showing, champagne and hors d'oeuvres.

The doors will open at 2:30 o'clock and there will be a short intermission during the 93 minute film. The Womans club hopes for a sellout in order to continue their support of Valley charities.

cognizant in the Prelude to Act I, depicting with great vividness the sights and sounds of the dawn; and in the well known dance of the Persian slaves in Act IV, Scene I.

The surfaces on all of these four discs are superb; the sound quality is exceptionally colorful and brilliant. This set is most highly recommended as the best recording of this opera on all accounts--musically, vocally, instrumentally and tonally.

SHOSTAKOVICH: Symphony No. 8 in C minor (Andre Previn conducting the London Symphony Orchestra--Angel S-36980)

The Eighth Symphony was written in 1942, while the battle for Stalingrad was raging, and it reflects the tragedy and bitterness of total war. It abounds in music of profound depth and tragic emotion. Its five movements must be considered as a whole with the clarity of construction and inner unity. In particular, the epic tragedy of the long opening slow movement, with its intensely moving principal subject, an extended melody for the first violins, can justly lay claim to being Shostakovich's finest single symphonic creation.

A grotesque Scherzo marks the second movement; the automatic rhythm of a toccata with its militant rapid march is a feature of the third movement; a passacaglia, in a tranquil and reflective mood, is indicative of the fourth movement; the finale is in a pastoral mood, alternating with ominous echoes of the past--the total symphony being a work of profound pessimistic outlook tinged with a compassionate regard for all humanity.

Andre Previn leads the London Symphony Orchestra in a highly idiomatic and extroverted reading, with all the various moods and nuances exposed with definitiveness and expressiveness. The Orchestra responds positvely to his virile lead, and the total adds up to a performance of virility, sensitivity, and brilliant intensity.

One is tempted in this connection to compare this performance with the one issued not so very long ago on Melodya-Angel, in which Kiril Kondrashin conducts the Moscow Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra. As was to be expected, there are points in favor of the Previn recording and others in favor of the Kondrashin recording, but whichever performance is chosen, it is symptomatic of the Shostakovich of the war years, with each performance projecting lytical sonority and rhythmic abundance.

The surfaces are excellent; the quality of the emerging sound is brilliant, and highly evocative of the best reproduction, technically and musically.

Deer Dance tops uneven performance

By Chris Keller

Heels clacked, the mariachi band blared and orange, rose and green Mexican skirts twirled in time. But something was missing in Sunday evening's performance by the Ballet Folklorico Mexicano de Graciela Tapia -- spontaneity.

The Ballet performed seven dances from various areas of Mexico, and an invisible MC preceeded each dance with a short history of the area where the dance originated. The sound system went awry, the music sometimes sounded like a tape recording and musicians looked as though they were only "mouthing it" from time to time.

Flanders, Doolittle estates

Carmel considers park

By TOM LUECK

At its northern boundary, the Paul and Grace Flanders estate lies just beyond the pines and oaks at the intersection of Mountain View and Forest avenue. From there the 15-acre tract descends rapidly to the south, a heavily forested canyon which forms a natural stream for runoff from storm drains in the northern part of the village to the Carmel River.

Most Carmelites are aware of the stately home which lies on the Flanders estate. It is one of the most impressive in a community filled with impressive homes. But many are unaware of the secluded and quiet canyon which lies beneath it. Most knowledgeable of the shaded topography of the Flanders estate are the neighborhood kids from homes on Hatton road and Crespi avenue. They've been playing in it for years.

Adjacent to the Flanders estate on the south are 18 acres of meadows, redwood trees, underbrush and marshlands which form the Doolittle estate. Now heavily overgrown, it is open to view across Rio Road from the Carmel Mission Basilica.

Taken together, the two estates form a long narrow stretch of open space which sits in the midst of the village's residential zone, and beyond the village limits into an area governed by the county. It is the second largest tract of open space in Carmel, second only to the city beach.

The 33 acres of varied terrain support a remarkable variety of vegetation and wildlife. Raccoons and squirrels rummage through the wild berry bushes and wildflowers growing on the Flanders property. Large eucalyptus, oaks and willows are in abundance. One can occasionally spot a deer where the forest gives way to meadows on the Doolittle tract.

Many feel that the Flanders-Doolittle tract should be maintained as open space.

In June of 1971, long negotiations between former mayor Bernard Laiolo and William Doolittle ended in an agreement by which a portion of the Doolittle property was made a gift to the city and the remaining portion was purchased for a price of $120,000. In December of 1972, the city purchased the Flanders estate from the heirs of its original owners for a price of $275,000.

The intention of city officials, which is consistent with both the Carmel General Plan and the area plan, has been to develop the property into a primitive park. Now, after two years of planning, a tentative plan for the park and an environmental impact report have been submitted.

A public meeting has been held in order to inform area residents of the type of work to be undertaken, and next week's public hearing will precede final approval of the project by the city council.

The city's plan for the property however, remains very general and tentative. Several options are held open for response by the public. In light of objections to the project expressed at the July public meeting, it seems certain that the basic plan for the development of the Flanders-Doolittle tract will stir a great deal of controversy before it is approved.

Basically, the plan calls for development of the land as a scenic park appropriate for hiking trails and very limited recreational use. No camping would be allowed. No recreational equipment or picnic tables would be installed in the park. While some parking would be provided along the streets which border the property, no cars would be permitted on the park property. An unpaved service road would be maintained for the city's forestry department.

For purposes of maintenance and policing, the city proposes to bring the Doolittle tract--which is now county land--into the city limits. In order to annex the undeveloped tract, a small residential neighborhood block on Ridgewood Road and a portion of Junipero Avenue must also be annexed.

City Administrator Hugh Bayless explained that more than 50 per cent of the home owners in that area have signed a petition favoring annexation. While another petition will be circulated, and the proceedure will probably not be finalized for about a year, he said he expects "no problems" in bringing the area into the city.

The proposal which has generated heated controversy is that portions of the low-lying marshland on the Doolittle tract be elevated by land fill.

In the view of planning director Bob Griggs, the project offers a very positive opportunity to "recycle" earth from road construction work in the village. He explained that if the lower parts of the Doolittle property are to be made at all appropriate for hiking or other recreational use, they will have to be elevated by some sort of fill.

"I look at it as both an ecologically and economically sound proposal. As it is, we've been talking for a long time about tearing up and repaving Ocean Avenue for a few blocks up near Highway 1, and if we don't use that earth for some purpose in the city we'll have to cart it to the Marina dump. I don't like to see good earth wasted that way," Griggs stated.

The city's tentative plan calls for immediate construction (using land fill) of a bridge across the stream at the northern boundary of the Flanders property to allow access to the park. Following that, a fill operation would be undertaken on the lower Doolittle property, and would continue for a period of "10 to 30 years---dependent upon what public projects are being done within the city and the earth ratio to organic materials." (Fill would be limited to 10 per cent organic materials under restrictions of the State Water Quality Control Board.)

The portions of the property affected would be brought up "an average height of five feet," and the operation would attempt to maintain the natural contour of the land. While the fill would cover willows and smaller ground cover, the site would be replanted with pines and redwood.

The city has planned measures to minimize effects of the long term fill operation on the surrounding neighborhood. To minimize the visual impact, all fill would be placed on the property in 30 foot swaths from east to west so that only a relatively small area of the operation can be seen at any given time.

A somewhat less positive view of the proposal than that of Griggs has been taken by several area residents. Pacific Grove attorney Elwood Wilson, representing a group which has formed under the banner of "Dump the Dump," expressed determined objection to the land fill operation at the July public meeting.

He argued that both the wildlife and vegetation in the area would be seriously affected by the fill operation. Repeatedly referring to the project as a "dump" rather than a land fill operation, he stated "The problem we've got to face is that the city has got to find space for a dump."

"We know it is tough to find space for a dump," he continued, "but it will be easier to find it now that ten years from now. Let us leave this property in its present condition."

Wilson indicated this week that he and other concerned area residents would be present at Wednesday's public hearing to argue against the land fill operation once again.

One of the options open to the city in their overall plan is development of lagoons in the water flowage through the property. Griggs explained that some work is necessary to stabilize the stream created by storm drain runoff into a meandering brook. He and other city officials envision two small ponds on the upper part of the Flanders property and a larger lagoon across from the Mission on the Doolittle tract.

Another option remains open concerning the possible sale of two or three large lots for residential development in the south-east corner of the Flanders property. The land is presently zoned for residential use, and the sale of a few acres of the exceptionally atrractive land would compensate for part of the expenses accrued in the park development.

Griggs said the city could impose restrictions in the deeds of those lots calling for single story homes which would not have a substantial effect on the park. He did however express the personal view that the city should retain ownership of the land for future use.

The city's biggest dilemma, as plans for the park are being formulated and debated, is finding an appropriate use for the

Public Hearing

A public hearing will be held before the Carmel Planning Commission next week concerning the city's plans to develop the Flanders-Doolittle property into a municipal park. The hearing will be held at 4 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 16, in the city council chambers.

Flanders home. The park plan suggests that if no acceptable use can be found for the home, which sits almost directly in the center of the Flanders property, it should be demolished. But city officials are agreed that demolition of the magnificent old home would be a tremendous loss.

Built in 1923, the Flanders home is one of the largest in Carmel. It has four bedrooms, in addition to those in what were the servants' quarters. From the circular drive one views the formal gradens which cover the grounds. The entire roof of the three story structure is covered with imported ironstone shingles. The market value of the home, with a large lot surrounding it, has been estimated to be as high as $300,000.

But what can be done with it? Several proposals have been put forward.

One of the suggestions considered by the city has been to convert the home into a museum. While that idea has not been totally rejected, it is viewed as an expensive proposition in that--even if an adequate museum collection could be gathered--the building would need to be guarded at all times.

Another proposal has it that the building be used to house a collection of city offices. Its out-of-the-way location has been presented as the principal argument against that scheme.

"If we could only find some use that would be compatible with the park," Griggs pondered. "Some religious organization, or some other quiet use which wouldn't bother people in the park would be fine with us."

"It would be a shame to tear the place down," he stated.

Ballet Folklorico

On the other hand, there were, some very outstanding moments, one of which was famed dancer Jorge Tyller's interpretation of the Deer Dance. The dance is part of a ritual ceremony performed by the Yaqui Indians before a hunt. Mr. Tyller danced the part of the frightened deer who is pursued and finnally killed by two hunters.

For those few moments Tyller actually became a trembling animal, driven with fear, leaping into the air and finally writhing in agony at his death. For those few moments the audience inched up to the edge of their seats.

Another particularly memorable performer was Daniel Armas who plays an instrument called the salterio or psalter. About the size of an autoharp and covered with strings, the instument has a ringing tone and a great range.

Armas played a number of solos, from Mexican folksongs and popular tunes to the theme song from "The Sting," with enthusiasm and skill.

Most of the dances, although very folky and colorful, were rather similar, lacking the drama of Spanish Flamenco. One exception was an early dance with Moorish influence in which dancers shrouded in sheer white veils and turbans moved ghost-like to distinctly Arabic music.

For one dollar a printed program could be purchased which outlined briefly the history of each dance as well as the troupe's success in one city after another.

The last performance of four in Carmel left the impression that we were near the end of the tour and the dancers were about danced out.

The theatre was two-thirds to three-quarters full Sunday night and it is the reviewers opinion that at $5.00 a ticket, with nothing cheaper available, Sunset Center will have even more difficulty packing a house in the future.

The Ballet was the type of event that might have interested children, but not many parents will shell out that kind of money for a family of youngsters.

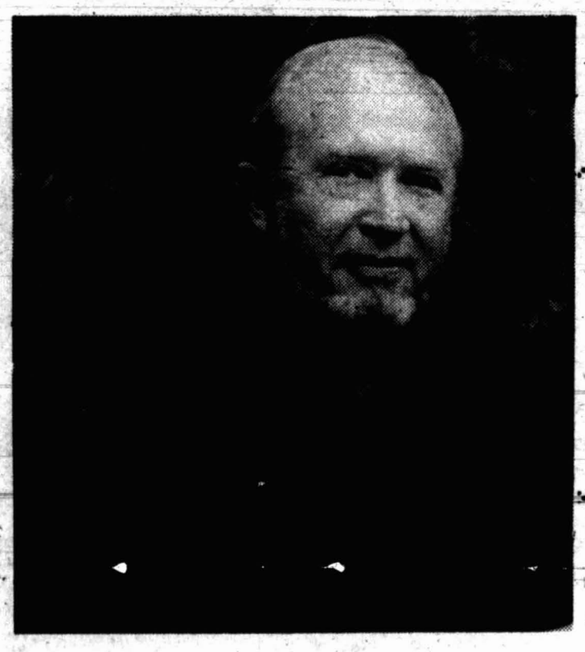
'We think Carmel is a hell-of-a-place to live, and we'd like to do what we can to keep it that way.'

Gene Hammond-- planner

Ready to 'drop everything'

By Tom Lueck

Gene Hammond has lived in Carmel for two years. In that short period of time he has 1) researched and written, entirely on his own, a five-part study of parking problems in the commercial and residential districts; 2) served on the board of directors of the Carmel Citizens Committee; and 3) most recently, accepted an appointment to the Carmel Planning Commission.



He's a real community activist, and has repeatedly expressed a hard-line committment to preserving the character of the village.

"I don't suppose the label would fit me in relation to national issues, but as far as Carmel is concerned, I guess I'm a conservative," he explained, sitting in a small study in his recently acquired home at Casanova and Thirteenth.

"We've got to do everything we can to maintain the village character. I, for one, would like to see no more commercial growth--even though we have some commercial zones still undeveloped."

Gene and Dorris Hammond moved to Carmel in 1972 from Marin County. Both natives of Denver and alumni of Stanford University, they have lived in various Northern California communities over the past twenty-five years.

"We've maintained contact with Carmel through frequent visits since our college days," he said. "Over the years we have had a chance to sepnd time in places like Lake Tahoe, Santa Barbara, and other attractive communities. But Carmel was the place we wanted to come. Now that we're here, I hope I can be involved in village affairs for a long time."

A journalist, author, sports car enthusiast and part-owner of a San Francisco based import-export business he described his background prior to moving to Carmel:

"After the war (1947), Dorris and I returned to Denver and could see that wasn't the place for us. We settled in Palo Alto where I worked as a writer for various trade publications, published a small magazine, and other things. In 1955 I wrote the text for the Palo Alto General Plan."

'We can't afford to let in the kind of development that had been approved down there.'

While he says he has no experience as a professional planner, Hammond accounts his work for the Palo Alto city government and a subsequent position with the Richmond Development Foundation (working principally on the downtown re-development project in that city) for his interest in municipal planning.

"We lived in Marin County for 15 years," he explained, "commuting into Richmond and later into San Francisco. It was during that period of time that we became very involved in sports car rallies. We did it just about every weekend. I was on the national board of the Sports Car Club of America. We organized the first national rallies in Northern California, and put a lot of energy into it."

"I decided to give writing a try again and put together my "Handbook" for sports car rallying," he continued. Hammond's book, which was distributed nationally in both hardcover and paperback, was give excellent reviews by major newspapers. "But we came to the point where our first daughter was entering high school and decided we better knock off this rallying every weekend," he said.

During the major part of his 15 years in Marin County, Hammond was involved in import-export sales. HammRich, a company which he and fellow sports car enthusiast Bill Richards started in 1962, has its base of operations in San Fancisco's World Trade Center.

"I wouldn't say I'm in business now in Carmel," he explained. "I'm spending 15 to 20 hours a week managing a few old and established accounts for the company, but my time is largely my own. If something comes up, like the parking study I did, I'll just drop everything and devote my time to it."

His willingness to "drop everything" reflects the commitment which Hammond brings to his current involvement in Carmel affairs.

"We've always been involved in school and community affairs," he said, "but in Marin County there was no incorporated body to work with. The idea of getting involved on the county level didn't appeal to me. But now in Carmel I have something tangible to deal with and I'm excited about it."

Initially, the Hammonds' involvement in village affairs came with Dorris' position on the board of the League of Women Voters. One of her responsibilities has been to observe the proceedings of the city council and planning commission, and the two were regular members of the audience.

"It became obvious to me when I began attending local meetings that one of the really critical problems in Carmel is parking, and I found out from talking to people that no one had done the job of compiling existing data. While I wasn't in a position to offer any solutions, I took on the job of compilation," he said.

Hammond's five part parking study began in January of this year and was completed in June. It included, among other things, data from 10 previous studies, a comprehensive inventory of parking spaces in the commercial zone, an analysis of turnover in commercial parking spaces and a study of all day parking in the residential zone.

While it did not provide "solutions," it did provide an incentive for the study, now underway, by students at the Monterey Naval Post Graduate School which will result in recommendations to the city regarding the parking problem.

His appointment to the board of the Carmel Citizens Committee came in April, a position which he resigned in July when he was appointed to the planning commission seat vacated by Ted Fehring. He explained that his resignation from the citizens committee came in order to avoid possible conflicts of interest.

"My feelings about the community were very much in line with those of the citizens committee, but I didn't want to put myself in a position where I would be forced to abstain from voting on an issue at the planning commission because I had cast a vote on the same issue in citizens committee proceedings," he said.

Hammond's planning commission vote on development, particularly in the commercial district, seems likely to be on the negative side. In August, when he had been seated on the commission for only two meetings, he expressed the most adamant opposition of all commissioners to the proposed development of condominium units in Carmel on lots which provide less than 1000 square feet per unit. (The commission eventually rejected the condominium proposal, drafting an ordinance which requires at least 1000 square feet of land area per condominium unit.)

"I hear my neighbors talk about the terrible things that have happened to Carmel. Now obviously, those terrible things have happened to the commercial district and not to the residential district," he said.

"One of the things we've got to work on is discouraging take-out food establishments. I don't know how that can be handled, but we've got to come up with some means of discouragement -- maybe requiring enclosed containers for every item of food that goes out of a restaurant."

"Another area of concern," he continued, listing issues which are bound to fall in the hands of the commission in upcoming sessions, "is development at the mouth of the valley. That isn't our jurisdiction, but apparently there is a lack of concern at the county level. We can't afford to let in the kind of development that has been approved down there."

Sitting at his desk, in front of files of notes and ordinances, Hammond pondered over a wide range of issues.

He spoke of the need for more adequate public transportation to serve the community's elderly population.

He expressed apprehension about the state department of Parks and Recreation's plans to designate the Carmel Bay as an "underwater park."

He spoke of the large amount of routine work which is taking up most of the planning commission agenda at it's bi-monthly meetings, and the need to "sit back and look at the broader picture."

"We think Carmel is a hell-of-a-place to live," he said, in explanation of his efforts over the last year, "and we'd like to do what we can to keep it that way."

Cal-Am testimony entered in Seaside PUC hearings

Installation of new facilities to pipe water from the Carmel Valley basin to Seaside if pumping there is suspended in compliance with recommendations in the Department of Water Resources Report would cost California American Water Co. approximately $3.2 million and would require about three years to complete, according to testimony presented at the Public Utilities Commission hearings in Seaside last week.

The commission hearing officer Parke L. Boneysteele heard direct presentation of the report by engineer Richard Meffley, who was cross-examined primarily by Cyril M. Saroyan.

Cal-Am testimony in response to the report was presented Wednesday and today by Richard Sullivan, vice-president of the company.

Reporting on the company's plans to meet the water requirements of the Peninsula and Carmel Valley on an interim basis until a long range source of surface water on the Carmel River could be developed, the company said it would be at least six years before any such source would be availible.

Cal-Am has retained Kennedy Engineers, who projected a four year time schedule for completion of a dam and filling of the resevoir, but did not include any time factor for environmental impact reports and permits, which the company estimates would take two years. Also to be developed within those two years is financing.

The report continues, "The company believes it might be 10 years or more before the additional surface supply would be available to the community."

The 10 year estimate was based, the report says on the Corps of Engineers' time schedule, which indicates 1982 as the "most optimistic" time schedule for completion of a multi-purpose dam, plus two years for various delays.

In projecting its requirements during that period until surface water becomes more plentiful, the company estimated a minimum of 21,000 acre feet by 1980 and 32,000 acre feet by 1985, based on normal growth and water consumption.

If restrictions of the 1973 Interim Order were removed, the company anticipated sources of supply. For 1974, it would meet its 18,000 acre feet demand as follows, the report said: 2,500 to 3,500 acre feet from the Seaside wells, 5,000 to 6,000 acre feet from the Carmel Valley underground and 9,500 acre feet from the surface supplies.

By 1985, the company would depend on 2,500 to 3,500 acre feet from Seaside, 10,000 to 11,000 acre feet from the Valley underground and 9,500 acre feet from the surface supplies. The project demand is 23,000 acre feet.

In order to reduce pumping at Seaside, the report indicated, about six miles of pipeline and related pumping and storage facilities would have to be installed from the Valley over the hill to the Del Rey Oaks-Seaside area, previously discussed as the Canada de la Segunda Pipeline Project. Until it is completed, the company says, they cannot reduce pumping in the Seaside area to 2,200 acre feet annually and further development of Valley wells would be useless.

In response to commission questions, the company acknowledged that more of the existing ground water could be delivered to the system by existing facilities while still maintaining optimum use of surface supply. However, it pointed out Canada de la Segunda project facilities and the Begonia Iron Removal Plant would both have to be in service in order to achieve a material increase of use of the underground water.

"The company does not believe the quality will be affected," the report said, "But with the completion of the Begonia treatment plant the company will have the ability to handle all iron and manganese removal of all existing wells." wells."

It continued, "The company's experience in the development of its most recent two wells in the Carmel Valley, namely Schulte well and the Begonia well, has indicated that treatment for iron and manganese is necessary. Sampling programs by the company in conjunction with the Monterey County Flood Control and Conservation District, of private wells in the lower Carmel Valley further indicates and substantiates that any new wells which might be developed will require treatment."

Numerous studies are necessary to determine locations of new wells, the company report said, and noted that Dames and Moore have indicated to date that;

ON HIS WAY to setting a new Formula 5000 record at Laguna Seca Raceway in Monterey is [illegible] champion Mario Andretti. In a practice session to ready himself for the upcoming Monterey Grand Prix to be held at Laguna Seca Oct. 11-13, Andretti shattered the record set last year by Englishman David Hobbs and came within a hairsbreadth of breaking the all time track speed record established in the 1973 Can-Am by Mark Donohue. In addition to Andretti, two other Indianapolis 500 champions, Al Unser and Johnny Rutherford, have entrered the Monterey Grand Prix.

Padres demolished 42-7

By Doug Thompson

The Carmel Padres opened their 1974 Mission Trail Athletic League (MTAL) season, after three pre-season games, rather inauspiciously last Friday night in Gonzales.

Carmel was buried by Gonzales 42-7. The Spartans are the strongest team in the MTAL and defending league champions.

Carmel is now 0-1 in league play and 0-3-1 overall. Gonzales is 1-0 league and 4-0 overall.

Seeking to avenge last year's loss at the hands of the Padres, Gonzales was fired up for the grudge match.

Gonzales' fullback David Raffile, whom Padre players and fans got to know all too well, shredded Carmel's defense for four touchdowns. Raffile rushed for 156 yards in 19 carries for a super 8.2 average, including a 54 yard touchdown run.

Carmel Head Coach Jason Harbert plainly stated that Gonzales has undoubtedly a better football team than the Padres do this year. The Spartans clearly proved this as they out-gained Carmel in total yards 304-134.

Harbert feels Gonzales has everything going for them. "They have experience, good size, and quickness. The only team with a chance of beating them this year is Pacific Grove. I believe that they could beat the Monterey Bay League foe if they make the playoffs this year."

Harbert felt Gonzales was thoroughly ready for his team this year. They used a defense against Carmel that had not been previously scouted in three games. Gonzales came at the Padres straight up, and took them apart.

One of the keys to the game, Harbert pointed out, was that the Spartans got off the ball quicker and with more authority.

With Gonzales leading 42-0, Carmel salvaged pure embarassment by scoring. Ed Canadas went over from the one yard line with 2:09 left in the game. It was the first score against the Spartans this year.

Coach Harbert praised quarterback Mike Chappell who he thought played a fine game under the circumstances.

"When we got behind, they knew we had to pass and were ready for it," Harbert observed.

Once again, numerous passes were dropped by the butter-fingered Padre recievers. Chappell completed five of 17 passes for 87 yards and threw four interceptions. Gonzales' John Gardoni returned one of the astray aerials for a 38-yard touchdown. Rick Parker of Carmel caught four passes for 55 yards.

Fullback Mark Nichols showed he could run with the ball early in the game. Nichols pounded out 37 yards in seven carries, before leaving with a shoulder injury which kept him out for almost all of the second half.

On defense, Harbert again praised Chappell in his role as the safety.

"We pulled out all the stops for this game including having our quarterback play defense. He responded with a heckuva game. He'll be there on Saturday too," claimed Harbert.

Rand Makowski and Jeff Ryan were also singled out for their adept play on defense.

Unfortunately Ryan suffered a broken thumb and will be lost to the club for four weeks.

"Jeff has done such a fine job for us this year it is a real shame to lose him. He has performed consistently on both offense and defense. His leadership abilities will be greatly missed," Harbert lamented.

Gonzales is seeking an unprecedented

Top seeding obtained by Gonzales

Tournament officials have released the seedings and draw sheets for Almaden Vineyard's Vintage Pebble Beach Senior Open Tennis Championships, Oct. 10-13 at Pebble Beach.

Seeded No. 1 was Pancho Gonzales who bested Frank Sedgman as a result of Gonzales' win over Sedgman three weeks ago at the Pacific Southwest tournament in Los Angeles.

Twenty-four players will quality for 8 spots in their attempt to get on the ladder.

Don Budge and Gene Mako, the famous duo from the 30's have entered the 55 division. Budge, the first player to win the grand slam of tennis (1938) had said about him: "Watching him play is equivalent to taking a $100 lesson."

Ticket information can be obtained by calling: 624-8711. All proceeds will benefit the Monterey County Symphony Guild.

fourth straight MTAL title this year. The community participates a great deal in Gonzales football. There is a lot of dedication on the part of Spartan players and fans. It's no wonder Gonzales plays eight of their ten games at home this year. They have the nicest high school facility in the central coast section. The "brain trust" of the team lies in the hands of head coach Larry Welsh who deserves a great deal of credit for the team's success.

As Padre Mike Chappell said after the game, "They just go out there and play football. You make a good hit on one of them and they get up and say nice hit buddy." No flareups in the game occured and when you have a rout that is unusual, but that attests to Gonzales' good sportsmanship.

The Hollister Haybalers, Carmel's next opponent, opened league play last week with a 21-7 win over King City.

The only common opponent both Carmel and Hollister have played thus far this season is the Santa Clara Panthers. Santa Clara nipped the Haybalers 12-10 and edged Carmel 13-12.

Hollister was a major reason the Padres did not win the MTAL last year. Carmel lost the game 34-21, and it seemed to let all the air out of the Padre balloon.

This year's Hollister team is suffering from a lack of experience just as Carmel is. But four games into the season, the inexperience tag can be dropped.

The Haybalers have a strong defensive "front seven." (The four linemen and three linebackers.) The running backs are new to the varisty, but their offensive line is experienced. Last year's junior varsity quarterback, is the varsity signal-caller this year.

Hollister runs the option like all MTAL teams do. The Haybalers also feature an outstanding field-goal kicker, who can be a factor-in close games.

The two teams will meet at 2 p.m. on Bardarson Field in Carmel this Saturday.

A Guy DuBets field goal was almost the winning factor in the junior varsity game. DuBets kicked a 25-yard field goal in the third quarter to put the Padres out in front of the favored Gonzales Spartababes 3-0.

But a solid Gonzales drive late in the fourth quarter capped off by a 2-yard run by quarterback Domingo Gonzales did the Padres in 6-3.

It was a gritty performance by Carmel who almost knocked off the number one J.V. team in the league.

"It was our best offensive game yet. We had over 2000 yards in toal offense," remarked Carmel head coach Frank Lynch.

He had praise for quarterback Mike Scalise, who played his first game at that position. Lynch also named halfback Mike Harbert and wide receiver Bill Colohan as having done fine jobs.

Defensive coordinator Joe Feldiesen was very pleased with the way his unit played.

"We held defensively until the last drive of the game," commented Feldiesen.

Asked to point out defensive stars, Feldiesen named practically the entire unit. Defensive stand outs included Rick Palmer, Martin Tracy, Bill Colohan who intercepted a pass, Jim Marsh, Mike Harbert, Ken Hohler, Dan Sturges and particulary Bob Pollard.

Their next foe, the Hollister J.V.'s , have won their last two games. Hollister won last year's game 13-6.

Lynch feels that the kids now realize the potential they have, and he hopes it carries into the Hollister game. The J.V. game starts noon at on Saturday.

The Gonzales Freshmen dismantled Carmel's Frosh 58-0 last Friday. The Padre ninth-graders will kickoff the day against Hollister at 10 a.m.

Real Irish Stew

By Phyllis Jervey

We anticipate "Ireland" the color film at Sunset Center to be presented and narrated in person by San Franciscan Chris Borden. Especially we'll enjoy an armchair tour by boat on the river Shannon. My son who visits me frequently in Carmel has just returned from Ireland and raves about the fresh green lushness everywhere. Also the food not that he stayed in swank castles. His favorite was genuine Irish Stew. True to Party Plans' custom with these excellent Explorama films, we suggest simple native menus to serve at home before or after the programs. This is what my obliging son returned with straight-from-Ireland:

Genuine Irish Stew
(Serves 6)

Four lbs. boneless lamb 1-inch cubes are covered with boiling water to which an herb bag is added consisting of thyme, chives, parsley, a few whole peppercorns, 2 whole cloves. Add salt & pepper, 12 white cabbage leaves, 12 small peeled whole onions, 12 little scraped carrots.

Cover tightly, simmer gently one hour. Now add 12 small new potatoes, scrubbed, unpeeled left whole. The Irish dote on potatoes. Cover again and continue another half an hour. If meat is not tender, remove vegetables, keep warm, cover again cooking until meat is tender. Skim off most of fat from liquid, add to it a mixture of flour and milk blended into finished stew.

My son Jack liked Boxties-on-the Pan, a popular snack as far back as the Victorian era at Rugby and Eton.

One lb. peeled potatoes, 1 lb. potatoes cooked in jackets, 3 cups flour, salt, buttermilk, 1 tsp. baking soda, piece of bacon rind. Grate raw potatoes into a cloth in sieve. Drain saving juice. Squeeze out raw potato pulp until dry. Set juice aside to settle. Peel boiled potatoes, cut and mash adding raw potatoe pulp. Stir well. Sift flour with baking soda and salt. Pour off potato juice, retaining starch in bottom. Add this to flour mixing with potato mixture. Stir well before adding buttermilk to make batter fairly soft. Mixture must be well beaten and allowed to stand briefly. Roll on floured board in hot dog shape. Rub griddle with bacon rind, fry boxties slowly browning on both sides. Serve hot with butter and cinnamon sugar. No wonder Irish and English boarding school boys devoured these.

What with locally cured hams and bacon, fish poultry and game one fares well in Ireland although to me so much starch washed down with stout is a bit too much. If you are trying your hand with boxties, include the spinach salad but omit the Irish stew. Hame with a fruit glaze tops them all.

Halfway baking your country ham, brush with one or another of these fruit glazes: Ginger-Glaze 1 cup ginerale, 1 cup orange juice, ½ cup light brown sugar, 1 Tbsp. ground or powdered ginger, 1 Tbsp. grated orange peel, whole cloves. Combine and cook gently while stirring. Make diagonal cuts into ham, stud centers with a whole clove or two. Then brush with glaze so that ham will be shiny.

Orange Marmalade Glaze: Half cup orange marmalade to 1 cup dark corn syrup with dry mustard to taste. Combine well without cooking. Used to glaze ham.

Red Currant Jelly Glaze: One cup red currant jelly, 2 Tbsps. dark corn syrup, ½ tsp. dry mustard, 1 Tbsp. white vinegar. Combine in small saucepan. Simmer until jelly is melted and mixture smooth. Quick & easy.

To accompany this delicious ham, make Fried Apple Rings: Three large red apple rings; 3 Tbsps. butter. Wash and core apples, trim ends. Cut each crosswise into 4 slices. Heat butter in large skillet. Saute apple rings until just tender, turning once.

Fruited gingerbread is quite the thing to serve with afternoon tea which my son found so delightful in front of a gently glowing fireplace, so homey and welcome what with hiking through meadows of green grass. Jack didn't bring back a recipe for this since it didn't seem appropriate at the time.

But we have Ginger Crunchies instead, less caloric or at least divisable. Mix together ¾ cup butter or margarine, 1 cup sugar, 1 Tbsp. vanilla extract, 1 egg, ¼ cup molasses, two and ¼ cups flour, 2 tsps. baking soda, 1 tsp., each, salt, powder cinnamon, ginger, cloves. Mix and chill for 30 min. Shape into walnut-sized balls. Roll in sugar. Bake at 375 F. about 10 min. Tops will have a crinkle pattern similar to old fahsioned snaps.

--The water to be produced at additional well locations and the amount available depends on the location.

--The optimum capacity is unknown and will depend on the pumping schedule and location of wells.

--If additional well sites are comtemplated, the existing computer simulation model should be employed to aid in choosing the site.

--Any additional wells should be designed to maximize ground water production capability near the base of the aquifer. This recommendation was based on the possibility that some of the high iron content problems might be reduced if upper zones are sealed off.

--Selective water sampling during drilling is recommended to identify zones of undesirable water quality.

The report indicates Dames and Moore, Cal-Am consultants, have started further study already, and estimated it would take from 12 to 18 months to complete, noting no new major producing wells could be drilled on existing company property because of the property size and location of existing wells.

TREATMENT FACILITIES

Existing treatment facilities are the iron removal plant in operation at the Schulte well with a rated capacity of 2.5 million gallons per day, the report said. Currently proposed is a 7.5 million gallon capacity iron removal plant for the Begonia well.

Estimates for treatment necessary for new wells can not be anticipated until wells are sunk, the company said, although most will require some type of treatment.

The company estimates it would cost $75,000 to develop an additional well, including property, drilling, testing, pump, piping at the well, fencing and landscaping and engineering.

"If we are to assume that three additional wells would be required to meet the requirements until 1985 and that these could be treated through one treatment plant, costing between $500,000 and $700,000, plus a minor supply main to the transmission main, the total estimated cost would be in the neighborhood of $1 million. This is in addition to the Canada de la Segunda pipeline and Begonia Iron Removal Plant previously mentioned," the report said.

Pre-school spots

The Mid-Valley Parent Nursery, located at St. Philip's Lutheran Church on Carmel Valley Road, has several openings available for pre-school children.

The program, under the direction of Marilyn McCurry, seeks to provide children with an environment in which they can explore their world and develop social relationships and readiness for kindergarden in a positive, unpressured atmosphere of fun and acceptance.

The Nursery is a co-operative program operating through the Carmel Adult Education program and is open to families living in the Carmel Unified School District. The children, ages 2 years and 9 months to 5 years old, attend the school five mornings a week from 9 to 11:30. Fees are $15 per month and parents participate in the program one morning a week and attend a regular meeting on Thursday nights from 7:30 to 9:30.

In spite of higher fuel costs, there are some things you can do to cut your heating bills this winter.

True, the cost of fuel oil and natural gas continues to climb. And that's something that we have no more control over than you do.

It means, among other things, that to continue giving you the kind of service you're accustomed to, we've had to increase our rates. Because we, too, use fuel oil and natural gas—to keep our generating plants running.

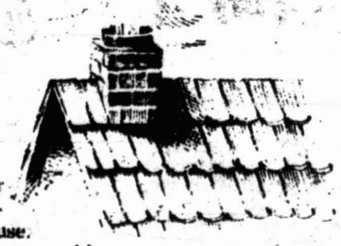
But winter itself contributes to bigger PG&E bills. During winter you use more energy to light and heat your home.

And while you can't control the weather—or rising fuel costs—you can save energy and help hold down your heating bills by following these simple pay-for-themselves suggestions:

Weatherstrip around doors and windows. This keeps the warm air in and the cold air out where it belongs.

Have your furnace person check your heating system now. Also clean or replace filters if necessary. That way you'll be sure your furnace is working efficiently and is ready for winter before the first cold snap.

Insulate. Good insulation in walls and ceilings can cut heating up to 45%. Which means it can pay for itself.



Shut damper when your fireplace is not in use. If you leave it open, cold air rushes in and furnace heat escapes. Also, shutting drapes over windows at night can reduce heat lost through windows by as much as 16%.

Set your thermostat at 68° or lower. Turn it down even more when you leave home or go to bed.

General Store restaurant celebrates grand opening

With barbeque fires burning and champagne bubbling, the General Store and Western Union restaurant on Fifth near Junipero celebrated its grand opening last Saturday night.

The restaurant has a brick patio, open hearths, dark antique wood and English pub tables, all created by owner John Kirchenbauer.

John is originally from Germany, as is his wife Brigitte, and he served both with the U.S. Navy and Army. After his military stint he went to Stanford to become an engineer. He got involved with construction and had his own general contracting business. Then there was a transition to the restaurant business and many experiences later John decided to combine the two by creating an ideal restaurant.

For many months John has been collecting wood, from a defunct logging camp in Big Sur and an old barn in Manteca. Having worked in custom-building and remodeling, whipping up a wooden hutch, or the white oak bar, or the massive entry door, was no skin off his knuckles.

According to his father, Robert Burmeister who flew from Germany for the opening, John learned his skills under the tutelage of his father in the Black Forest.

The General Store and Western Union's chef is Charles Ober, a Swiss with a remarkable background in the culinery arts. Before coming to Carmel, Charles was general manager of Luchow's in New York for a time, and also presided over the kitchens of the Four Seasons, the Ginger Man and the Red Baron.

"What we are having is a renaissance in food. This is a disposable society we're in now. We're going along with a flexible menu as far as what we offer."

The cuisine is international at the restaurant. Examples of specialties are fillet of sole with pepper and walnuts, or loin lamb chops with lemon mint sauce.

The restaurant is very open and customers can wander over to the kitchen area and watch the cook and his two trainees stir up gourmet sauces and soups.

Recently retired Naval Commander, Jim Peters, is bartender.

"I was a close friend of John and his wife, so when they asked me if I'd like to tend bar I said why not. I've had 31 years of drinking all over the world, I feel I know enough about it."

Perhaps the most unique aspect of the restaurant is that as you bite into a shrimp smothered with green sauce and are suddenly seized with the desire to telegraph your mother or the president, just step up to the Western Union window next to the bar. John and Brigette are the Carmel agents for the telegraph company and Brigitte is the local operator.

More seriously, John would like the community to know that what he is trying to do is "to provide a restaurant equally good to all the others in Carmel."

Supervisors vote 4-0

Appeal of Villas Carmel ruling denied

By Leslie Johnson

The appeal of the proposed Villas Carmel del Pacifico development in Carmel Valley was denied late Tuesday by the board of supervisors after hearing-weary engineers decided to proceed with their presentation before a four-member board instead of accepting a continuance.

The board was reduced to four members when Fifth District Supervisor Willard Branson declared he would not vote on the matter as a "lame duck" and handed the chairman's gavel to Roger Poyner before vacating the chambers.

The remaining supervisors heard over four hours of testimony before reaching a unanimous decision to deny the appeal.

Each of the supervisors expressed concern about sanitation and public health questions raised at various points along the hearings route berore casting their ballots.

Arthur Atteridge, District Two, said, "The doubt I have about sanitation has to be satisfied by our health department. The developers have not convinced me that the health department is wrong."

He continued to say that he could not agree with the planning commission denial on the basis that the development was "premature." "This is inconsistent with what this county has done before in zoning this particular piece of land for residential development. The owners of the land are entitled to development," he said.

Ellis P. Tavernetti, District Three, noted the 11 adverse potentials listed in the EIR and said that some of the problems were "unavoidable, but I am concerned about this matter of sewage."

Poyner raised a question about the proper forum for some of the questions and suggestions being raised at the hearing. "Somehow I have a feeling we are in the wrong forum. This project has gone on for a long time and I sense the developers' frustrations. Perhaps some of these problems should have been brought to the board earlier. For a major development of over 300 units, it would be to the developers' advantage to seek a more informal forum to ascertain the sensitivities of the board and staff toward such developments," he said.

First District Supervisor Warren Church moved denial and Tavernetti seconded the motion.

The hours of testimony before the action, had been occupied by George Bestor and Associates' presentation concerning the development, accompanied by slides, maps and arguments surrounding the planning commission denial of the project.

James Moore, counsel for Carmel Valley View Ltd., the developers, said that the appeal would center on "substantial undisputed evidence on the composition and slope of the soil presented at the planning commission" that, he said, had not been successfully disputed.

Bestor himself spoke from a personally transcribed copy of Walter Wong's testimony as director of the health department before the planning commission, attempting to refute Wong's remarks concerning the soil's capibilities to handle septic tank effluent.

Various members of the development team, including William Rummel, consulting sanitationist, offered possible conditions the company would be willing to work under if the appeal were supported by the board. Among those conditions were:

--Prior to filing a final map, design criterion ... be established for each lot, position of residence and location of septic tank.

--Further tests and evaluations of water and soil in the subdivision would be undertaken.

--All septic tanks would be limited to the lesser slopes of each lot.

--Duel systems would be required for each lot to allow for periodic renovation and maintenance.

--If deemed necessary, monitor wells would be drilled and a program established to monitor water quality and set up an early warning system on any need to abandon septic tank activity.

Carl Hooper of the Bestor firm also said that two of the original 35 conditions placed on the devlopment would, in the company's opinion, require further consideration. These included:

--The connection of certain storm drains toward Carmel Valley Road. Hooper said other drainage easement had been acquired to channel flow directly to the river.

--Slope rounding of certain grades. Hooper said certain suggested slope rounding would unnecessarily destroyed an extra 20 per cent of the natural vegetation.

The decision can be appealed through the courts. The planning commission denial was by a vote of seven to two.

In other action, the board voted to pay the 1974-75 AMBAG assessment to provide the clearinghouse and counsel to local governments services only.

Stean-Stevens appeal succeeds

A decision of the Carmel Planning Commission to deny an application for conversion of apartment units to condominiums was overturned by the city council Tuesday night.

The council's action came on an appeal from local developers Ralph Stean and Dr. Robert Stevens, and grants approval to a tentative subdivision map on the development now under construction at Mission and 4th street.

The 4-1 vote voiced in favor of the appellants seemed to predict final approval of the development at the November meeting of the council.

The council also voted to postpone action on an ordinance drafted by the planning commission which would regulate condominium development in the village, requiring a minimum of 1000 square feet of ground space for each unit sold.

The Stean-Stevens development was originally granted a use permit more than one year ago as an apartment complex. As such, it provided only 667 square feet of ground area for each unit. When an application for conversion of the project to condominium use was submitted in June, the city was forced to acknowledge that it has no ordinance dealing specifically with condominiums.

While several condominium developments have been granted use permits which provide a minimum of 1000 square feet of ground area per unit, no condominiums have been permitted which provide 667 square feet.

City officials have debated and studied the issue for three months, focusing principally on the relative merits of apartment and condominium use. While a number of substantive arguments have been raised in favor of condominiums, the planning commission's decision last month to reject the Stean-Stevens proposal and draft an ordinance requiring 1000 square feet per condominium unit was based primarily on the argument that the number of low rent apartments in the village could be diminished by condominium development.

While the issue seemed resolved at the planning commission, it remains unresolved at the city council.

In presenting the motion to postpone action on the proposed condominium ordinance, Councilman Olof Dahlstrand voiced an attitude shared by a majority of the council. "I remain ambivelant about this whole issue," he stated. "There is no evidence that condominiums are such a horrible thing, and we have very little knowledge of the issue on which to base any final action at this point."

Several members of the council will attend the annual conference of the League of California Cities prior to their November meeting. Mayor Bernard Anderson suggested that several workshops and study sessions will be offered at that conference concerning condominium development, and the council might better decide on the issue at hand "with a little more input from other cities."

Print class offered

A mini-course in print making, sponsored by Monterey Peninsula College's community services department, will be offered on Thursday evenings from 7 to 10 p.m. beginning Oct. 17.

The course will be instructed by Virginia Sevier Rogers, professional artist and print maker, at the studio of Gallery V.S.R. on Carmel Valley Road.

Over a six-week period, the course will cover designing for a print, methods of taking a print by hand and by press, lino printing, wood cut, etching, found object printing and monoprinting.

Approval of the sale of the company's controlling interest in the realty firm was voted by Del Monte Properties Company directors at a regularly scheduled meeting recently.

Both Glaser and Forzani have served as officers and are currently directors of the realty company subsidiary.

The Realty Company was formed in October 1970 to function primarily as a single family residential and lot sales organization of Del Monte Properties Real Estate Division.

A new mood

By Candy Kaller

This year Carmel High School has experienced a definite change in atmosphere from recent years on the campus. Communication with new principal Dan Stevenson and new vice-principal Marty Krovetz appear excellent. This has led to more interest on the students' part in improving school spirit and activities.

The student council took advantage of this feeling of comroderie and instigated a contest between the four classes for the best show of school spirit. One of the activities for the competion included a volleyball game between the classes, with the winner playing the faculty. The junior class team became the champion volleyball players of the school, but then were defeated in the finals by the faculty.

Several dances have also been planned. Until the CHS gym renovations are completed, all of the dances will be held at the Middle School Gym. Homecoming is planned for October 26, following the King City game.

The student council has a new class this year, called Leadership. This class has given the council members enough time to prepare for the activities that they have planned.

Vice-principal Jim Watkins teaches the course. He has had many speakers in to bring suggestions for school improvement and new ideas for activities. Jeff Ryan, student body president, stated that many of these functions have been planned in hopes that all of the students, faculty, and administration can become involved.

Senior class officers have been extremely busy planning activities for the year. Cap and gown colors have been voted on, and fundraising has started for the senior gift. Seniors have planned several pot luck dinners, and are making a float for the P.G. football game, which is to be held at Carmel this year.

Seniors are all busy with college applications, scholarship applications, SAT's and Achievement Tests, but they are also planning their Disneyland trip for the end of the year.

Carmel High School's student council is trying hard to keep the new-found wave of school spirit alive on campus, and in doing so hopes to have many activities during the semester to come.

'WHAT A NICE PLACE'
We have a very special restaurant It's very nice, without sideshows. And very delicious, with prices families can honestly afford. We have made some nice changes these past few weeks, our Smorgy tables really sparkle . . . Taste salads so fresh and crisp they brighten your day. Try chicken, crisp and crunchy, the way millions love it. Savor choice beef prepared with a true gourmet touch. Find our what our new Smorgy is all about . . . it's surprisingly affordable.

So you're making a good salary. But you're not saving any of it. Instead, you want to go after the "big deal" that's going to make you a cool million. Maybe.
What happens if your big scheme goes sour? You've still got to get through the future.
So maybe you'd better join the Payroll Savings Plan now. Just sign up at work. An amount you specify will be set aside from your paycheck and used to buy U.S. Savings Bonds.
That way, you can still afford to take a few financial risks, if that's your bag. But you'll always have a solid cash reserve to fall back on. And that's being smart.

Take stock in America.

Rebuilding of the recently burned Hotel Del Monte has started with the construction of a dining room lobby grill room with a dance floor and lounge rooms. Large corps of workmen will rush the buildings to completion for the Thanksgiving celebration and will be ready for the Christmas and New Year's events.

The new dining room will be located between the west wing and the kitchen. It will be informal but attractive with windows on all sides. The plans call for appropriate decorations with a hardwood dancing floor. Below the dining room will be a grill with a dance floor, also available for moving picture shows, banquets, etc.

The two wings and dining room will be connected by a runway entirely enclosed with a green and gray striped awning. In fair weather the runway will be open at all points and will be lined at the sides with potted palms and plants. At night it will be brilliantly lighted.

Carmel is to have a big political meeting next Monday afternoon. The Flying Squadron of the Coolidge-Dawes Republican League is scheduled to arrive here at 3:30. Arrangements have been made to erect a platform on Ocean Avenue opposite the Pine Cone office.

H.F. Uttley, director of the Squadron, sends word that the speakers selected are Paul F. Clark and Robert Littler. R.C. DeYoe will preside.

Carmelites got a pleasant shock on Thursday afternoon when a wireless was received from San Jose announcing the marriage there of Mrs. Vivian Dingley and Paul J. Denny.

EDITORIAL

Signor Marconi, speaking the other day in Rome, promised that before long speech will be heard by radio from a given station all over the world at once, a promise that may well thrill the 3,000,000 American homes already equipped with radio apparatus, and add impetus to the onward rush of an industry which is reported to have grown from sales amounting to a trivial $2,000,000 in 1920, to $120,000,000 in 1923, and by estimate to $350,000,000 in 1924. Assuming 24,000,000 as the approximate number of homes in the United States, a statistician writing in Radio News says that nearly 13,000,000 of them have automobiles, 9,000,000 have phonographs, and 3,000,000 have radio sets. Evidently a home without either of these possessions is hardly to be considered a home at all: it is merely such a place as human beings ate and slept in the nineteenth century.

Monterey Peninsula's first all woman American Legion post was organized at a meeting held last Tuesday night in the County Building at Monterey.

An estimated 500 women veterans of both wars residing on the Peninsula are eligible for membership. Its aims and purposes will parallel those of the men's American Legion.

Potential fireladies and firelassies from Sunset and Carmel Woods School took their first indoctrination courses this week at the Carmel Fire Department, as a feature of National Fire Prevention Week, October 9-15.

Professors Jack Montgomery, Frank Hefling, and Delbert Wermuth put the kiddies through a series of half-hour sessions which consisted of fire prevention talks, exploration of the fire department, fire bell ringing, watching the-man-slide-down-the-pole and climaxed by a ride to and from the school on the shining red truck.

Plans are nearing completion for the biggest and most festive yet Dolores Street Halloween party for all Carmel. it is to be entirely in the hands of the Kiwanis this year. There will be all the fun and features of the previous Halloween parties, (cider and doughnuts, prizes for costumes, games, and entertainment), with the special Kiwanis touch.

A group of men are in the process of acquiring property at the southwest corner of Dolores and Seventh Streets, presently used as a parking lot for Nielson's Grocery, for the site of a motion picture theatre to be called the Carmel Theater.

Preliminary plans for the 550-seat theatre with off-street parking for employees, prepared by Kip Stewart, have been submitted to the Carmel Planning Commission for consideration by its design review committee, according to Floyd Adams, director of planning.

Hopes of rejuvinating the venerable Forest Theatre were discussed at last evening's meeting of the Arts Commission. Approximately $4,000 is earmarked in the city budget for the express purpose of repairing the sagging stage and improving lighting and seating in the rustic ampitheater.

Telecare celebrates anniversary

Volunteers who operate the Telecare service at Community Hospital are marking the second anniversary of their service by offering to provide it to anyone interested.

Telecare is a daily reassurance call made to those who live alone. There is no charge for this telephone service.

A committee of 15 active and associate members of the Auxiliary headed by Mrs. Paul (Janet) McKelvey operates the service on a rotating basis. A volunteer calls some 32 subscribers daily.

More subscribers can be accommodated, but the free service has to be requested by calling 624-5311, Ext. 399.

"We think of it as providing a s.nder lifeli.." for those who live alone, those who have a medical problem, or those who merely wish to preserve a degree of independence in their senior years," Mrs. McKelvey said.

Obituaries

THOMAS

Services and burial have been held in Pampa, Tex. for Charles Lee Thomas, a resident of Carmel since 1945, who died at Monterey Hospital Oct. 7 after a period of failing health. Memorial services will be held at All Saints Episcopal Church, in Carmel, Saturday, Oct. 12.

Born in Pampa Tex. in 1913, he was a well known Carmel figure in the arts and theater. He served four terms as president of the Association of Western Artists. He received numerous awards for his paintings in oil and watercolors.

He was a director, actor and set designer for numerous Peninsula theatre groups, including the First Theatre, Circle Theatre, Studio Theatre, and Outdoor Forest Theatre Guild.

Before coming to Carmel, Mr. Thomas played roles on Broadway including Max Reinhart's production of "The Eternal Road" and "Too Many Heroes" with Shirley Booth.

In radio, he was on "The March of Time" for three years and in "Cavalcade of America" for two years, along with Orson Welles and Agnes Moorehead.

He was in many soap operas and was one of the "Gang Busters" in early radio. He was also director for the New York City Opera Guild productions in Carnegie Hall.

His Broadway career interrupted by World War II, Mr. Thomas was in Special Services for five years and was awarded the Bronze Star.

After the war he had his own company in Texas and Oklahoma, touring in "The Shining Hour" and "The Second Man."

He is survived by his sister, Dorothea Graham, of Glenrock, Wyoming.

Hague

Cremation and Interment have been held for Alden Thomas Hague of Pebble Beach who died Oct. 5 at Community Hospital.

Born in Blue Island, Ill., he came to Pebble Beach two years ago after 30 years with Standard Oil of Indiana, retiring as sales manager.

NOTICE OF FILING APPLICATION FOR INCREASES FOR INTRASTATE TELEPHONE RATES

The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company on September 30, 1974, filed with the Public Utilities Commission of the State of California an application for authority to increase certain intrastate rates and charges applicable to telephone service furnished within the State of California. The proposed rate increases will permit Pacific to offset increases in expenses due to wage, salary and associated increases. In general terms, the proposed rate changes are as follows:

No changes would be made in basic monthly exchange service rates.

Service connection charges would increase for new and additional service, moves of customer's telephone sets, certain changes of customer's sets and key telephone system services, and in place connection charges. The charge for initial connection of a residence telephone would be increased from $24.00 to $30.00; the business charge would increase from $35.00 to $45.00. The charge for a sustomer-initiated change in telephone number would increase from $5.00 to $10.00 for a residence telephone, and from $10.00 to $15.00 for a business telephone.

Charges for line extension and service connection facilities in suburban areas would be changed to reduce the free footage allowance and to base charges for excess footage on a percentage of cost instead of a flat rate per foot.

For intrastate message toll srevice, increases are proposed in operator-handled station and person rates. The day period direct dialed initial period would be reduced from three minutes to one minute. Under this arrangement, messages shorter than three minutes would cost more. In the evening, the rate for direct dialed messages under 51 miles would be increased, with decreases at certain mileage steps. The night direct dialed rate would be extended to include all day Saturday. For coin calls, a separate rate schedule would be established.

Residence extensions would be increased from $1.00 to $1.25 per month.

TOUCH-TONE Calling Service would be restructured for individual line and multi-line business and residence service and PBX trunks.

Some key equipment installation charges would be increased.

The Wide Area Telephone Service installation charge per access line would increase from $10.00 to $50.00

Certain miscellaneous and supplemental equipment installation charges and certain private line supplemental equipment installation charges would be increased.

The rates proposed in the application are estimated to produce additional annual gross revenue of $83,800,000 above present rate levels.

Hearings on the application will be set at a later date. Notice of such hearings will be published not less than fivw nor more than thirty days prior to the initial hearing.

The Company's proposed rates would become effective in various California counties and municipal corporations, including the County of Monterey and the City of Carmel, upon grant of authority therefor by the California Public Utilities Commission.

A copy of the application may be inspected by any interested person in the office of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company at 787 Munras Avenue, Monterey, California and in the offices of the Public Utilities Commission of the State of California, Fifth Floor, State Building, Civic Center, San Francisco, California, and State Building, 107 South Broadway, Los Angeles, California.

2 BRS, NR TOWN, OCEAN VIEW, $68,500
Here's a 2-bedroom, 2-bath, view home with double garage, situated 5 blocks to the Post Office. Business interests force its owners to sell this home that they bought new just 7 years ago. You can tell they have loved it ever since; it's in immaculate condition and shows immediately that much thought and care have gone into it. It's a pleasure to show at $68,500, a pleasure we don't think we'll have very long, so call to see it soon.

2 BDRM CHEAPIE & GOODIE -- $50,000
A real find!!! This great little Carmel cottage is loaded with charm, BUT it's in excellent condition -- even has an almost new central heating system and a modernized kitchen. It's quite close-in, on a large lot, yet it's also SECLUDED. Delightful living room with fireplace, dining ell, fenced garden planted with native trees and shrubs for easy maintenance, and a real estate PEAK of the ocean. Imagine all this for only $50,000.

BUY A PIECE OF HISTORY... COMMERCIALLY ZONED
Sound intriguing? This historic adobe in old Monterey is presently used as an office building. There's plenty of room on the lot for expansion or additions. $100,000. Exclusive.

A MAGNIFICENT ESTATE NEAR THE BEACH
Never have we more aptly said, "Must be seen to be appreciated!" The property consists of the whole of Carmel's Block 147, which runs between Camino Real and Casanova -- Santa Lucia and Frasier. It's a beautiful adobe home, built by Hugh Constock for its owner in 1937; quality, not price, was the objective. The home was 4 bedrooms, 3 baths, double garage. Living room is 18' x 32'; master bedroom is 15' x 29'. The garden is terrific. Well worth the price of $185,000. But as we said before, you just have to SEE it.

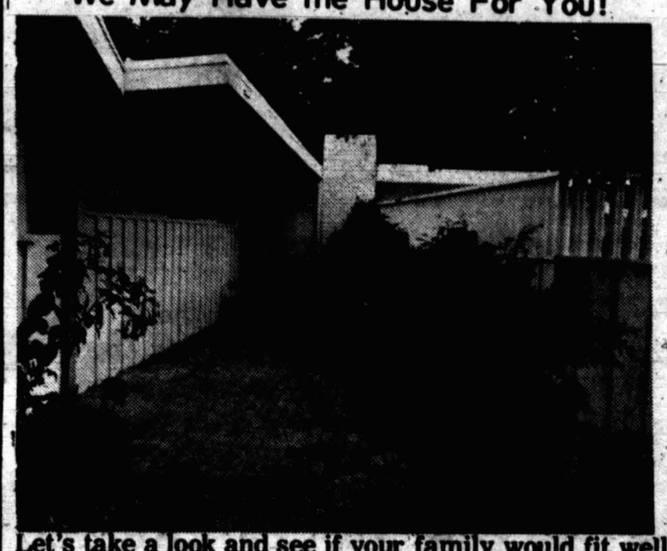
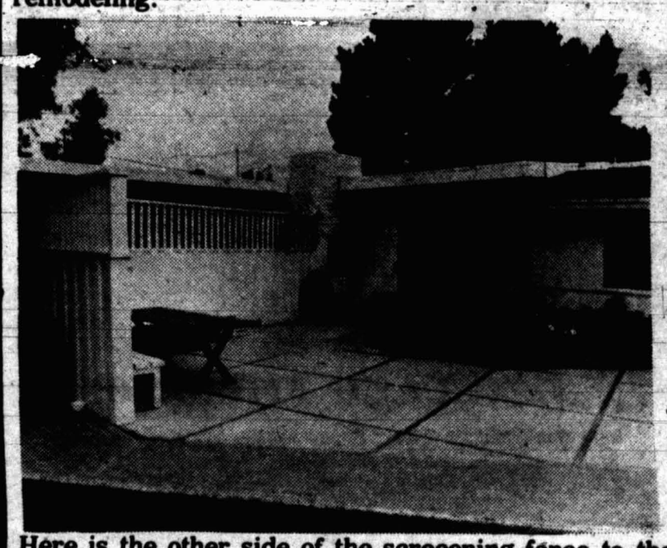
Lines from Lois

IF YOUR RICHES ARE CHILDREN INSTEAD OF MONEY,

We May Have the House For You!



Let's take a look and see if your family would fit well into this special world. There are four or five bedrooms and the approx. 3000 sq. ft. of floor space means lots of room for those family activities and hobbies. This home has clean, modern lines but it rambles comfortably over its big (340' x 120') lot and there is warm use of wood and brick and friendly natural materials. Built in the thirties, it has had extensive remodeling.



Here is the other side of the screeening fence to the right of the entry walk in the first photo. This spacious barbecue area faces broad front lawns which would be the most wonderful place in the world for that future swimming pool, as well as providing space now for croquet, badminton, lawn tennis and tea parties. Family pets will love the yard and its complete fencing would give you a free mind about the small youngsters at play.

At the North end of the property is a lovely natural canyon and this handsome deck offers many hours of pleasure to the bird watchers in your family, as well as providing expanded play and entertaining areas. There are fine trees and shrubs and the property offers the space and the climate for your home vegetable gardens. There are apple trees, cherry, nectarine, pear, plum, oranges and berries.

Is it possible to find all these advantages without being way out in Carmel Valley? We'd like to show you and let you decide for yourself if this handsome property in sunny Hatton Fields may be your family's answer to country living in town. The price is just $89,500. We'll be glad to help you work out your financing.
